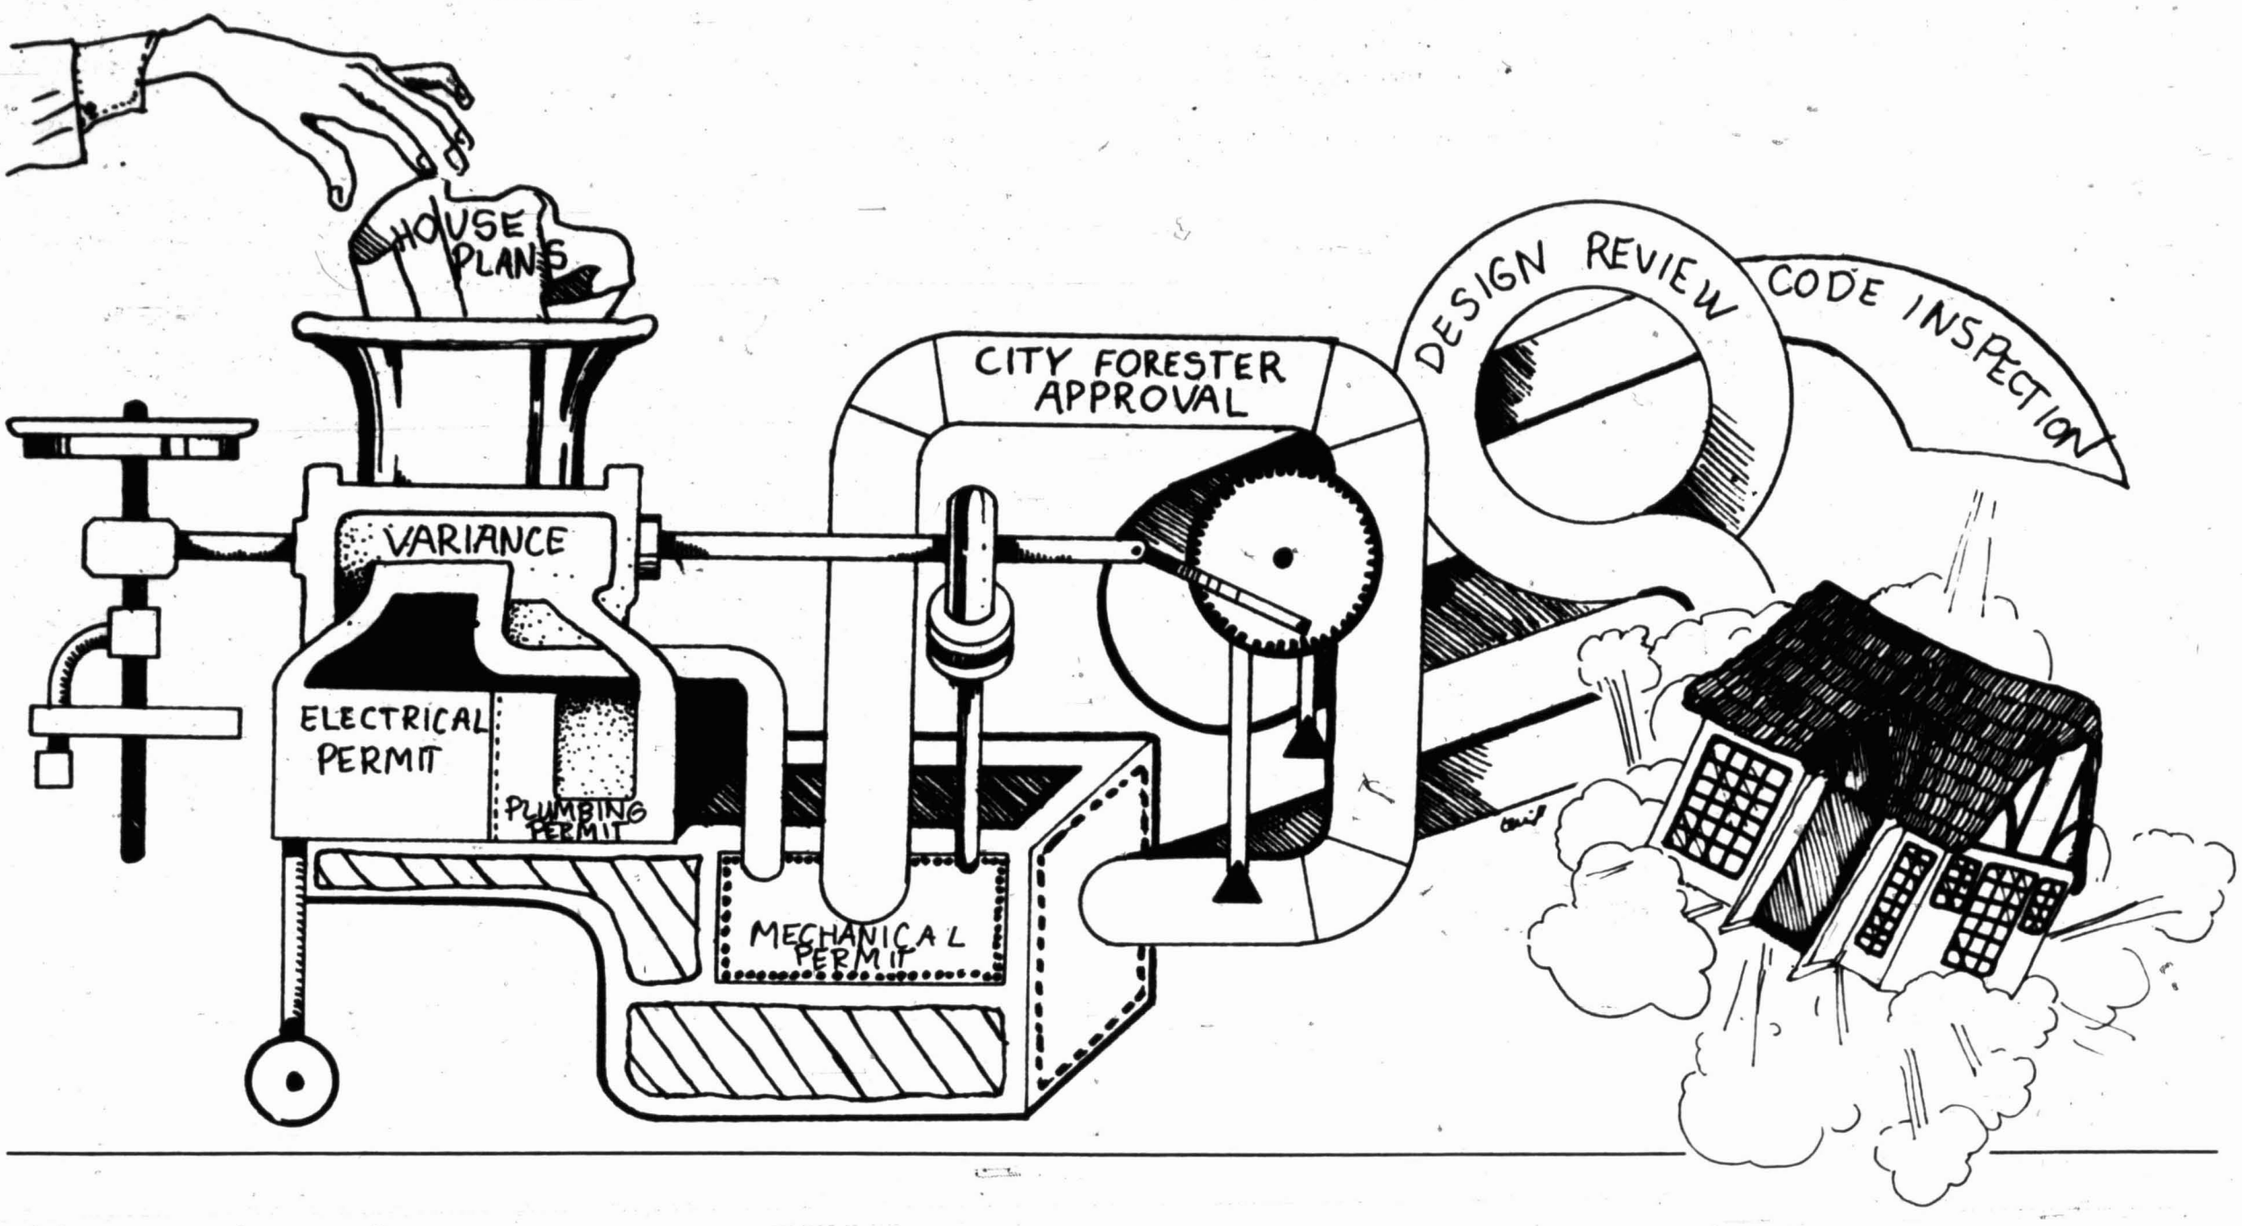
Workers free supports

More than it can chew?

CONSTRUCTION OF THE new Carmel branch office of Monterey Savings and Loan Association is scheduled to begin Oct. 1, pending final approval of the landscape plan by the Carmel Planning Commission. Demolition of the former service station at San Carlos and Sixth began Sept. 1 and is about 90 per cent complete. Workers from Clark and Clark Structural Demolition Co. of Monterey are scheduled to remove two 10,000-gallon holding tanks from underneath the asphalt this week. Bids for construction will be opened Tuesday. The $350,000 structure will be two stories high and cover 5,580 square feet. Because of planning commission objections to a proposed blue tile roof, the owners have agreed to switch to brown tile.

The Village



After recent embarrassment

Design review on big houses appeals to planners

CONTRACTORS WHO want to build a two-story house in Carmel or remodel an existing one would have to submit to special design review under a new proposal before the Carmel Planning Commission.

"We want to discourage oversized and objectionable homes," explained Robert Stephenson, chairman of the commission. He originated the proposal. Commissioners are scheduled to discuss it Wednesday when they meet in City Hall at 4 p.m.

Mandatory design review of residential construction plans has been debated by past commissions, but it never has been enacted into law. But the recent embarrassment the city administration endured in connection with construction of a so-called "large house" may make design review more appealing.

The owner, James Hopkins, obtained a building permit and his contractor, Hewitt Clark, had virtually finished by Aug. 7, when the City Council hastily issued a stopwork order at the site, Casanova between Ninth and 10th avenues. Stephenson had written to the council and said there were several building code violations inside the two-story structure. Unable to determine if the allegations were true, the City Council hired Eivin Falk, a private architect, to examine the charges and report back.

BUREAUCRATIC bungling" by the city building department, Falk said in his report made public Sept. 4, was to blame for any violations. Falk listed three or four he found and said the overall height of the house exceeded the temporary 24-foot limit by 11 inches.

Deferring action, the council asked a committee of city officials and employees to devote an additional month of study to the Hopkins house. Meanwhile, Hopkins cannot allow occupancy in the house although it is for sale and listed at $435,000. He also is unable to pay the half-dozen subcontractors who helped build the house. His loan cannot be released until the house is certified as complete.

"It's unfortunate," Robert C. Littlefield, president of Monterey Savings and Loan Association, said of Hopkins' predicament. The association is the lender on the house.

In a brief interview last week, Littlefield criticized Carmel leaders and blamed them for the inconsistency in enforcement for which he said Carmel is notorious.

"Observing Carmel politics, they don't seem to follow precedent very well. They don't establish a logical set of standards and follow them. It runs hot and cold. If they would just abide by some guidelines, things would be less chaotic," Littlefield said.

DESIGN REVIEW of two-story house plans is regarded as a way to prevent construction of houses which comply with building codes, but look overly large and out of place next to early Carmel homes. Hopkins obtained the necessary building permit, for instance, but when the house began to take shape, the planning commissioners started to complain about its dominance on the block.

Since March, city officials have sought ways to regulate "large houses." In May, the City Council adopted the 24-foot height limit. Last week, the council extended the moratorium to May or until a permanent ordinance is adopted.

Since 1946, the commission has reviewed designs in the business district.

Among the things the commission looks at are landscaping, building exteriors, wall colors and materials, signs and lighting.

There is one requirement in the city code about home design—no two residences on the same block can be identical.

Parts of Monterey and Pacific Grove, primarily along the beachfront, come under design review, according to Robert Griggs, the Carmel director of planning. Parts of Carmel on Scenic Road soon may be placed under design review by the local coastal program, Griggs added.

"Let's say each story of a poorly designed home is a sore thumb. One sore thumb may be bad. But two sore thumbs are twice as bad," Stephenson said, explaining why two-story houses were singled out. There are several acceptable two-story homes in Carmel, he added.

WE'RE NOT trying to discourage two-story houses. We're just trying to discourage large homes," said Eileen Thompson, a planning commissioner who favors the concept.

"It would give us a chance to review each site on which a two-story home is proposed. That is important, because the lots are all so different in Carmel," said Mrs. Thompson.

A planning commission subcommittee report, written in 1972, rejected any two-story residential design review. The report was submitted by former commissioners Dorothea Roberts and Fred Keeble.

"Design review of residential structures is not needed in the residential district. Present city ordinances control height of structures, setbacks and the duplication of design," the report said.

"Individuality and artistic expression in residential design has given Carmel its distinctive character. Design control would seriously hamper this quality," the report concluded.

The report is outdated, Mrs. Thompson said. "The price of homes and land accelerated considerably. Because of that, the tendency is to cover lots with more structure. These large homes need review," she said.

Under the proposal, the committee would review compliance with the zoning code. They are reviewed by the building department now, Stephenson said.

A similar suggestion was made by Falk in

Carmel asked how it would serve annexed areas

FACED WITH A deadline in two weeks, the Carmel City Council will gather at a special meeting Thursday to explain how it will supply municipal services if its unincorporated areas are annexed.

An area roughly equal to the size of Carmel has been mentioned in an annexation request filed Aug. 22 by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors. As a preliminary to the required public hearing process, Carmel must supply detailed service information to the Monterey County Local Agency Formation Commission. The commission wants the information by Monday, Sept. 25.

The councilmen scheduled the meeting at 8 p.m. in City Hall.

Services include street maintenance and fire and police protection. Also requested was information about how Carmel would pay for the expanded service. City Administrator Jack Collins has suggested a "similar level" of service should be offered to new parts of Carmel.

A POINT MADE clear at Monday's Carmel City Council meeting was that the desires of the council and the residents of Carmel will have little bearing on annexation. It is up to those residents of the area proposed for annexation—west of Highway 1 between Pescadero Canyon and the Carmel River—to decide, City Administrator Jack Collins indicated in a memorandum to the councilmen.

Carmel will be required to schedule a "protest meeting" sometime in November or December, according to Collins. The number of written protests received from registered voters in the area proposed for annexation, will determine if and how the area will be annexed, he said.

According to a memorandum:

- Annexation will be ordered if fewer than 25 per cent of the registered voters in the unincorporated areas sign written protests.
- The annexation procedure will stop if more than 50 per cent of the county-area residents protest in writing.
- A combined election of registered voters in Carmel and the unincorporated areas would be scheduled March 6 if 25 to 50 per cent of the residents in the outlying areas protest annexation.

"It strikes me as unreasonable," said Councilman Mike Brown. "What if the residents of the city are against it?"

The councilmen were silent. Collins broke the silence, "It strikes me the same way," he said.

"All at once, we're jumping on the fastest horse we can find and starting to run," Brown warned. The council

Argument about Rippling River's future

Civil rights law may thwart 'dream' for care facility

By KEN PETERSON

THE BATTLE OF Rippling River may be over, but it may have only been the first shot in a wider war.

The financially-floundering residential complex for the handicapped and those with low incomes in Carmel Valley probably will be sold to the Monterey County Housing Authority and converted into federally-subsidized low-income housing. It then will be available to elderly and handicapped individuals. They will be charged 25 per cent of their income for the rent.

The 10 handicapped people living there now will remain at the center. There are a total of 31 tenants. Bruce Moore, executive director of the housing authority, already has assured the handicapped they can stay.

But the larger issue left unresolved is a philosophical one regarding treatment of the handicapped. The residents at Rippling River would like the center maintained as it was originally envisioned: a semi-independent living center for the handicapped only.

Federal policy, backed up by civil rights law, is to integrate the handicapped into society rather than isolate them. So, federal dollars aren't available to make the dream for Rippling River come true.

REPRESENTATIVE Leon E. Panetta, D-Monterey, for one, thinks this may be the wrong approach.

Panetta lives just down the road from Rippling River and has been involved with the fate of the center's residents during much of their battle to keep the facility open.

Panetta met personally with representatives of the housing authority, the U.S. departments of Housing and Urban Development, and Health Education and Welfare, plus center residents, state rehabilitation officials and Rippling River management in January.

At that time, they discussed all possible alternatives for the center and settled on a sale to the housing authority as the best approach.

While maintaining the center exclusively for the handicapped—as it was originally planned—is theoretically possible, there would be no federal money forthcoming to do it.

Why? According to Panetta, it's because current federal policies "are not to segregate, isolate the handicapped, but to provide smaller facilities for them in the community, with access to jobs, shopping, services."

"Isolating them in Carmel Valley is not what the current policies would concur in," he said.

Panetta questions the commitment to "mainstreaming" as the only approach to housing the handicapped.

"You shouldn't have such a tight policy that doesn't provide for exceptions," he said.

"The point I think is always overlooked by the bureaucrats is the element of providing free choice, open opportunities for the handicapped for the type of lifestyle they want to have," said Panetta.

WHILE SOME MIGHT want to have neighbors with no disabilities, there are others who prefer living in a complex where most of the residents are handicapped.

His comments were echoed by Leslie Holloway, one of the Rippling River residents and a leader in the effort to keep the center exclusively for the handicapped.

"They want to put us in with the rest of the world, but the rest of the world isn't ready for us," she said.

Miss Holloway pointed out that there are many architectural barriers to be removed before the handicapped can travel about freely in cities. At Rippling River and in Carmel Valley Village, on the other hand, their movement is relatively unimpaired.

The center offers them a chance to live in individual apartments, travel country roads, use a swimming pool, she said. They have limited transportation to and from the center in a specially-designed van. Before recent budget cutbacks, the county also provided another van through the Community Service Department to take them to medical and other appointments.

What the center offers to simplify the "independent" living is communal meals in the Rippling River dining room. The housing authority wants to maintain that set-up after it takes over, but the basic plan for the center is to convert the 150 units there into some 30 individual apartments with kitchens.

Moore was unsure how long a communal meal set-up would be financially feasible. After all, he pointed out, you need to serve a minimum number of meals in order to make the system work.

THE HANDICAPPED at Rippling River are used to other social services, a "higher degree of care than the housing authority is used to providing," Moore said.

But, he added, by cooperating with other county agencies, those services will continue should the authority

Padre gridders open in Salinas; rely on quickness

By JAY POSNER

HOPING TO CAPITALIZE on overall team speed, the Carmel High School Padres open their varsity grid schedule Friday night against the Cowboys of Salinas High School.

The non-conference game starts at 8 p.m. at the Salinas field, 726 S. Main St. The frosh-soph skirmish is scheduled for 5:30 p.m.

Junior varsity teams were cut from Mission Trails Athletic League competition this season as an economy move after passage of Proposition 13.

Pictures of the starters, p.16

Coach Frank Lynch said that the team's strong points should be speed and the fact that the key positions of quarterback, running back, wide receiver are filled with excellent players. Quarterback John Lucido, who has been switched from wide receiver, will lead the Padre offense in the "I" formation. The starting running backs probably will be David Oliver, Mike Odello and Mark Nottenkamper, with Dave Araujo, Tim Sherman and Paul St. Germain filling in as replacements. When Lucido goes to the air, he will be throwing to either tightend Bruce Robinson or wide receivers John Hollister and Steve Selle.

The Padre defense, a 4-3 "Pro," will be anchored by senior defensive ends Tom Larson and Mike Harney, and by Paul St. Germain, a senior middle linebacker.

To test the team's readiness, the squad was divided into the "Reds" and the "Whites" on Saturday. The scrimmage lasted about an hour. The red shirts won, 51-6.

Lynch said the major weak spot is the depth of the club, which has been hampered by family moves and injuries to four players. Those players are Tom Vanatta, who moved to New Mexico; Dane Whitehead, who moved to Washington state; John Figuerres, who transferred to Monterey; and Derck Heniford, who has a knee injury. There will be 36 players on the squad, but only 14 played on last year's varsity team.

King City will be the team to beat in the MTAL because it has a large number of returning players, Lynch said. Pacific Grove and Palma also should be tough, according to Lynch. Palma has 129 players out for the team. It has an enrollment of about 450.

BACKS WILL run out of the "I" formation this year. Coach Frank Lynch is banking on superior overall team speed to keep the Padres in contention. During the red-and-white scrimmage Saturday, running back Paul St. Germain typified the 1978 game plan breaking off tackle for a first down. (Michael Stang photo)

Commendation

Dear Editor:

With the passage of Proposition 13 in June and the locally felt consequences (or lack of them), such as no summer school and no lowered rents, it seems worthwhile to note that a small band of volunteers at the Carmel Presbyterian Church got together and did something worth doing.

A few young people, out of high school and on their way to college, got together and put on an outstanding program for "junior high age" youngsters. Using Carmel Presbyterian Church as a base of operations, these young people spent many volunteer hours each week this summer taking exhuberantly active junior high age youth groups to baseball games, on fishing trips, to a horse ranch as well as involving themselves in one-on-one relationships to reach the children. In general, Mike Harbert, Laura Robinson and Jeff Yergler showed the younger people how to have a heck of a good time without getting into trouble and also how to be thankful for such pleasures, which are no longer such simple ones.

I hope that you will write an article on these young people so that our community may know there is a positive influence at work among and upon the youth of today. These youths are deserving of high commendation.

Honest people

Dear Editor:

This is just a note of thanks to the Carmel police, the sheriff's office and the kind and honest couple who returned my purse with everything in it.

I inadvertantly left my purse on my car while helping our large dog into it. We drove off with the purse still sitting there and went to Monterey. Apparently the purse fell off near the Serra statue.

This couple picked it up and called the Carmel police, who, in turn, called the sheriff's department (we live in Carmel Valley).

The Carmel police picked up the purse at the couple's home and gave it to the sheriff's officer who comes up the Valley. About two-and-a-half hours later when we returned home, a car came down the driveway and there was the officer from the sheriff's department, purse in hand with everything intact.

Thanks so very much to all of you. It's nice to know there are still some honest people in the world who care about others.

ELEVEN INCHES. That's 28 millimeters. You know wood expands when it's wet and shrinks when it's dry. The drought is over. We've had rain and lots of damp fog and heavy dews. Any house, whether completed or under construction, swells in dampness. My French doors swell almost an inch every winter and I can't get them shut. My feet swell, too, but that's beside the point.

My theory is that the wood in the Hopkins house is wet and that's the reason it's 11 inches too high. Just let the people have their house, turn on the furnace full blast and remeasure in six months. Bet it will be down those 11 inches.

My fee to the city for solving this problem is $1,360.

IN THE OLD DAYS, only the villain was bad enough to shoot someone in the back. Seems like that's gone by the wayside, along with many other time-honored traditions. Now, Our Honor, the mayor, is taking potshots at the back of vacationing Chief Building Inspector Fred Cunningham. I always thought you told somebody to "shape up or ship out" face to face.

Come to think of it, maybe the mayor is upholding tradition.

I'VE BEEN DRIVING one way in Carmel for years. East (up) on Fifth, west (down) on Sixth. Always go south on San Carlos and north on Dolores.

Bet if anyone were to analyze their driving patterns, they would find the same thing is true. And I can't see any harm in the proposal at all.

OUR MAYOR SEEMS so all-fired on anything that might even suggest more population (just plain people) in our fair city. I'm surprised he hasn't started a people-spay campaign.

NOW IF YOU put a fence half way down the cliffs along Scenic, isn't that going to double the erosion? After all, what goes down must come up again, or hang there permanently on the (barbed wire, did he say?) fence. Though, you might catch a few interesting specimens that way.

YOUTH IS A time for exploration. A time for learning, feeling and trying to express those feelings. It's a time of trying to find new methods, new techniques, new solutions to problems.

It is a time to spoof, even to ridicule, because even in that way, one learns. And in learning, one grows and (horrors!) even matures.

I can comprehend, understand and, even occasionally, applaud. But they speak for themselves, not me.

Somehow, my love of Carmel isn't truly defined by a film shot of a garbage can.

AGE IS A time of reflection, contemplation and mellowing. It is a time for savoring all that life has brought and for putting things into proper perspective.

Twenty years ago, there was only one garbage collection day in Carmel. That day, every storefront on Ocean Avenue and all the other streets was obscured by the rubbish and garbage piled high at the curb, waiting for pickup. If the truck was late, those piles would be there almost all day.

Now, if Carmel has come from an Ocean Avenue full of trash to an occasional overflowing can, I'd say that's not tourist deterioration, but resident progress.

And I'd say that's an expression of love.

It's silly season

by Al Eisner

CARMEL ATTORNEY Gary Varga, who lives in the unincorporated area just outside of Carmel, has come up with the "final solution to the annexation problem."

He notes that a lot of people living outside the city limits are fearful of committing their homes and property to the tender mercies of the folks who are presently members of the Carmel City Council.

He says a lot of people might not be opposed to annexation if the city council agreed to step down and hold a new election . . . hmmmmm!

THE SILLY SEASON is indeed upon us. It happens every election year just after Labor Day when the political candidates start their campaigns.

The silliest one we heard this week was a claim by Eric Seastrand, the young candidate for the 16th District congressional seat held by freshman congressman Leon Panetta of Carmel Valley.

Seastrand claims he is a "middle of the roader" and that he would be a moderate congressman. Could be. It could be, that is, if leopards change their spots.

Seastrand is a 12-year member of the John Birch Society. He resigned his affiliation with the extreme right-wing group just before he announced his candidacy so that "it wouldn't become an election issue."

Well, it is an election issue, whether he likes it or not.

Panetta has made quite a record for himself as a congressman. He has disarmed his Republican critics because he has done his homework. He has taken decisive stands on controversial issues and voted with his conscience. I believe the campaign ought to revolve around the issues. I hope the voters will not be subjected to this kind of chicanery by candidates who wistfully hope their backgrounds will not haunt them.

Seastrand is an extreme right-winger. He is not a middle-of-the-roader. If you want to have a recent member of the John Birch Society as your congressman, then vote for him. Let's not have any more of this slick packaging by powerful interests that are gunning for Panetta's seat.

ON PAGE 7 of this edition of the Pine Cone is an advertisement asking support for the community effort to save Robinson Jeffers' Tor House.

The historic structure on Carmel Point is threatened unless we can raise the money to purchase it and preserve it as a literary landmark for future generations.

Poet Robinson Jeffers built part of Tor House stone by stone with his bare hands. Jeffers, who has been called the "poet of ecology," embodied the spirit of independence and co-existence with nature that has characterized Carmel people since its founding.

The National Trust for Historic Preservation has given some funds to take an option on the property. An intensive fund-raising campaign is now under way. This is a worthy project that deserves the support of the entire community—the entire nation.

We cannot let Tor House go "on the block." If you have any ideas or can make a contribution or pledge, contact the Tor House Fund at the address shown in the advertisement.

We must save this part of our heritage.

IT WAS GRATIFYING to see that the City Council recognizes the need for a minibus system and Monday night acted to move ahead with studies.

The logic of a minibus system to relieve downtown traffic congestion is so obvious that one wonders why the city hasn't moved faster.

Giving credit where it's due, however, I guess we have to give a grudging nod to the council and hope the project moves swiftly.

THE CRITICISM levelled at Carmel Chief Building Inspector Fred Cunningham (reported in last week's Pine Cone) should be viewed from a historic perspective.

Mayor Gunnar Norberg has harbored a personal grudge against Cunningham for many, many years. He has, on many occasions, been sharply critical of the building inspector's policies.

When Norberg was a minority member of the council, he couldn't exercise the power to remove Cunningham.

Norberg is now mayor, with a council that seems all-too-ready to do his bidding. Let's hope Cunningham's fate is decided by his performance, and not by the whims of politics.

Panetta's foe warns Carmel club of U.S. insolvency

REPUBLICAN CONGRESSIONAL candidate Eric Seastrand told a Carmel audience Tuesday the country "is on a collision course with socialism and insolvency" that only can be halted by electing fiscal conservatives to Congress.

Seastrand addressed the Carmel Mission Kiwanis Club at a breakfast meeting as he campaigns to unseat Democratic incumbent Leon E. Panetta of Carmel Valley in November. Panetta's 16th district stretches from Santa Cruz to San Luis Obispo.

Seastrand, a Salinas stockbroker, said his top priorities are reducing federal spending and cutting income taxes in an effort to put the nation's economy back on a sound footing.

"We must get back to some economic sense in this country," Seastrand said, drawing an enthusiastic response from the Kiwanians meeting in the Carmel Rancho Holiday Inn.

Seastrand also blasted Panetta for talking like a tax-cut advocate and voting for new spending programs. He also criticized his opponent for a weak voting record on national defense issues.

HE TOLD THE audience the "biggest barrier" to balancing the federal budget is "politicians who talk one way and act another."

He said Panetta has endorsed a plan to reduce the federal budget by 5 per cent a year and income taxes by 25 per cent over four years, yet voted in favor of raising the federal budget ceiling by 12 per cent next year.

"Can you say you are for a 5 per cent cut and vote for a 12 per cent increase?" Seastrand asked. "I don't believe you can and be truthful."

He said the country's biggest problem is inflation and claimed it is directly related to the $50 to $60 billion federal deficits of recent years.

"Congress has no resolve whatsoever to come to grips with these inflationary problems," Seastrand said.

Inflation, not oil imports, also is causing the dollar to decline in value abroad, he said. Seastrand cited West Germany and Japan as two nations with strong economies, yet which depend totally on foreign oil.

"The dollar is declining because foreigners see no end to inflation in the U.S.," he claimed.

Seastrand endorsed the Kemper-Roth tax reduction proposal which would sharply reduce income taxes. With an 11-vote shift in the House of Representatives, the bill would have been passed to the Senate this spring, he said.

Continued federal deficits—the national debt is now $800 million, Seastrand said—"point to nothing more than mortgaging the future of our young people to pay for our current consumption."

BUDGET CUTS also will reduce the scope of federal government, he said. "The essence of liberty is the proper limitation of government," Seastrand declared. More money should stay in the hands of the private sector and be spent there, he said.

He said he favors continued strong defense spending, saying that the Soviet Union is building up its armed forces "faster than Nazi Germany" before World War II.

Seastrand cited an American Security Council rating of Panetta which showed him voting "correctly" on only one of 10 key national defense bills used in the council's assessment.

1,500 ready to race

MORE THAN 1,500 runners have signed up for the Don Lucas Ford Hospice Race on Sunday, Sept. 24, reports race director M.A. (Skip) Marquard of Carmel Valley. The 6.2-mile course starts in downtown Monterey and leads to Lovers Point in Pacific Grove where it swings back to Monterey. Entry fees will benefit the Carmel Valley Hospice, an experimental project where cancer patients live in a homelike setting. Pre-registration closes Wednesday. The fee is $4 and should be sent to Marquard at 312 W. Carmel Valley Road, Carmel Valley 93924. Runners also can register the day of the race. The fee will be $5.

Waitresses play DJs in benefit

Waitresses from the Hog's Breath Inn restaurant will take on a team of radio disc jockeys in the second annual March of Dimes Benefit Basketball Game.

The event is scheduled tonight at 7 p.m. in the Carmel High School gymnasium. A "hairy leg contest" is scheduled at half time. Tickets are available at the door. They are $3 for adults, $1.50 for students and 50 cents for children 12 and under. All proceeds go to the March of Dimes.

Local March of Dimes poster child Dominique Adoja will attend the game. Last year's game ended in a 34-34 tie.

Banker Peter Wright will resign

Peter C. Wright, vice president and manager of the Carmel branch of Wells Fargo Bank, said Tuesday that he intends to resign.

Wright, 51, said he will pursue other business interests. He mentioned real estate sales.

"There are no hard feelings on my part toward the bank. I am and probably always will be a bank booster. I have been asked to remain as a consultant to Wells Fargo on the Peninsula and I probably will accept," he said.

"I will stay on through an orderly transition which may be until the end of the year," Wright said.

Wright and his wife, Joyce, president of the Monterey County Symphony Guild, will continue to live in Carmel. They have six children, four of whom are adults. The youngest two, both boys, attend Carmel Mission and All Saints' Day schools.

Wright joined Wells Fargo 30 years ago and became the Carmel branch manager in 1971. The local branch is said to have the highest volume of loans and private deposits of any Wells Fargo office on the Monterey Peninsula.

In addition to pursuing realty sales and consulting, Wright said he will continue as vice president of a family holding company and as co-manager of the 3,500-acre ranch his family owns near Amador City in Northern California. The property is leased to private ranchers.

Wright is a member of the boards of directors of the Carmel Business Association, the Monterey County Symphony Association and the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce.

Design review

his report. Although he did not recommend planning commission design review, he did suggest a "reorganization" of the building department.

The report recommended stripping Chief Building Inspector Fred Cunningham of his zoning enforcement duties. It recommended that Cunningham act only on building code matters. These include enforcement of ceiling heights, room size and structural regulations. Zoning matters such as roof height and setback enforcement would revert back to the planning department.

IN LIGHT OF our present experiences with the James Hopkins house and the Nick Marotta house (Ocean Avenue and Carpenter Street), we need some sort of review," Stephenson said.

"If Clark (Hopkins' contractor) had brought those drawings into me, he would never have gotten away with that house," Stephenson said.

"We have no desire to control design. Nothing in there says homes must be Tudor or California ranch style. We just want compliance with the city's zoning code," Stephenson said.

There are about 12 building applications a year that would need design review approval, according to Griggs. Applicants would have to pay a minimum $25 fee for the paperwork to be processed and he said contractors could expect to wait about a month for approval.

Center should be for the disabled, residents say

U.S. attorney says the notion conflicts with civil rights decisions dating back to the 1950s buy the center from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The handicapped do not have the same disabilities. Some are elderly people suffering the infirmities of age. Others are young adults struck overnight by multiple sclerosis and now confined to wheelchairs. Some are accident victims. Others have difficulty speaking and communicating, in addition to other handicaps.

"Some people here never lived anywhere but with mother and daddy," said Miss Holloway. "I've really watched them blossom."

RIPPLING RIVER offers a compromised independence between total self-sufficiency and total dependence on family or paid nurses. Federal legal and fiscal emphasis is on making the handicapped independent of group homes or the need for special facilities.

Jonathan Bothello is a civil rights attorney with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare office in San Francisco. He specializes in cases involving the disabled.

The core issue "is the same as in the first civil rights decisions of the 1950s." Separate facilities—whether for blacks, Mexican-Americans or the handicapped—are inherently unequal.

While centers like Rippling River "in some cases would be appropriate," Bothello said the handicapped have the legal right to expect and demand equal facilities.

For a while, we're in a transition period," he admitted. "In a sense, we're promising more than we can deliver.

"But in a few more years, the handicapped won't face architectural barriers. They will be able to get on public transportation and navigate in town as well as someone without disabilities.

"Thousands of people in Berkeley do it every day," Bothello said. "The Berkeley ideal is a kind of goal for the whole nation."

He suggested that residents at Rippling River get in touch with groups like the Center for Independent Living in Berkeley. It offers assistance and training to help the handicapped make it on their own.

IN THE INTERIM, there are other centers like Rippling River which can meet the needs of those handicapped persons who need that type of facility, he said.

But, Bothello added, there is "no question the emphasis is on greater independence."

"We're just common, ordinary folks," added Miss Holloway. "We just get around different, that's all."

Mrs. Hunt said that while she can handle the independence at Rippling River, she doesn't believe she could get by without assistance in a "mainstream" situation. And if the communal dining room eventually is phased out, she said the handicapped effectively will be phased out as well.

"How are you going to get to a store in a wheelchair?" she asked. "And if you get there, how are you going to bring home groceries?"

Opponents of group homes like Rippling River "try to make it sound bad by saying they don't want a ghetto for the handicapped."

"Well, we want a ghetto."

"That's what they tell us," said Anna Hunt, a resident at the center. "Why don't they ask us what we want!"

Mrs. Hunt said the idea of putting the handicapped back in houses throughout the community is "the most stupid thing I ever heard. That's what we came out of."

"I feel like I had 13 years in prison. I was given a reprieve coming here. I've been here three years now and they've been beautiful."

She smiles a cherubic, grandmotherly smile, sitting in the common room of her apartment surrounded by still-life paintings of flowers she made in Rippling River's crafts center.

"It's a terrible feeling to have to be lifted if you want to get out of the house or into a car," she said. "Nobody has to help me here."

CURT SHERWOOD, a rehabilitation counselor with the state Department of Rehabilitation in Monterey, said Rippling River is "a fine concept in the wrong place."

The fact that it is 17 miles from the Peninsula and "depends on one broken down old van" as transportation has made it hard to offer educational and vocational programs for the handicapped there, he said.

Sherwood said he can see the need for a center like Rippling River, although he personally favors integrating the handicapped into society to a greater degree.

Sherwood said he can see the attraction of a housing complex in Carmel Valley, noting that many of his able-bodied acquaintances have chosen lower-paying jobs outside their specialty just to live on the Monterey Peninsula.

'We want a ghetto,' says one disgruntled resident

"There's a price for paradise," he said. In the case of the handicapped, it means less mobility, something HEW is not willing to underwrite with federal money.

Jim Miller, a quadriplegic and president of the Sacramento chapter of the California Association of the Physically Handicapped, said it is "a matter of opinion" whether integration or a group home is better.

"Personally, I feel if there is any way in the world to 'mainstream' a person, that is the way to go," Miller said.

The Center for Independent Living in Berkeley and similar operations like it statewide are dedicated to that premise.

And, according to executive director Phil Draper, there are a lot of tools available to the handicapped to help them make it.

State and federal money will pay to alter someone's home so they can maneuver about in a wheelchair or to help them find a suitable house if modifications are impossible.

There is money to pay for attendants help with bathing, dressing and meals for those who need it.

The Center for Independent Living counsels the handicapped to help them find these sources of money, Draper said. It also has a wheelchair repair service, attendant hiring service and can give hints on how to adapt a house and its furnishings to a disabled person.

"It's just a matter of an individual being fortunate enough to hear about it," Draper said. The Center for Independent Living takes that advocate role, since state and county social service organizations don't always reach out to tell the handicapped what is available.

"Did you know it's cheaper to maintain someone in their own home with an attendant than it is in a nursing home?" he asked. "If you get an active, happy person living in the community, they take better care of their health."

Draper said there is a need for "minimal transitional living"—but only to get the disabled ready to strike out on their own.

Living in a protected environment, he added, is "not really living independently."

"Most people are capable of a lot more than they think," Draper said.

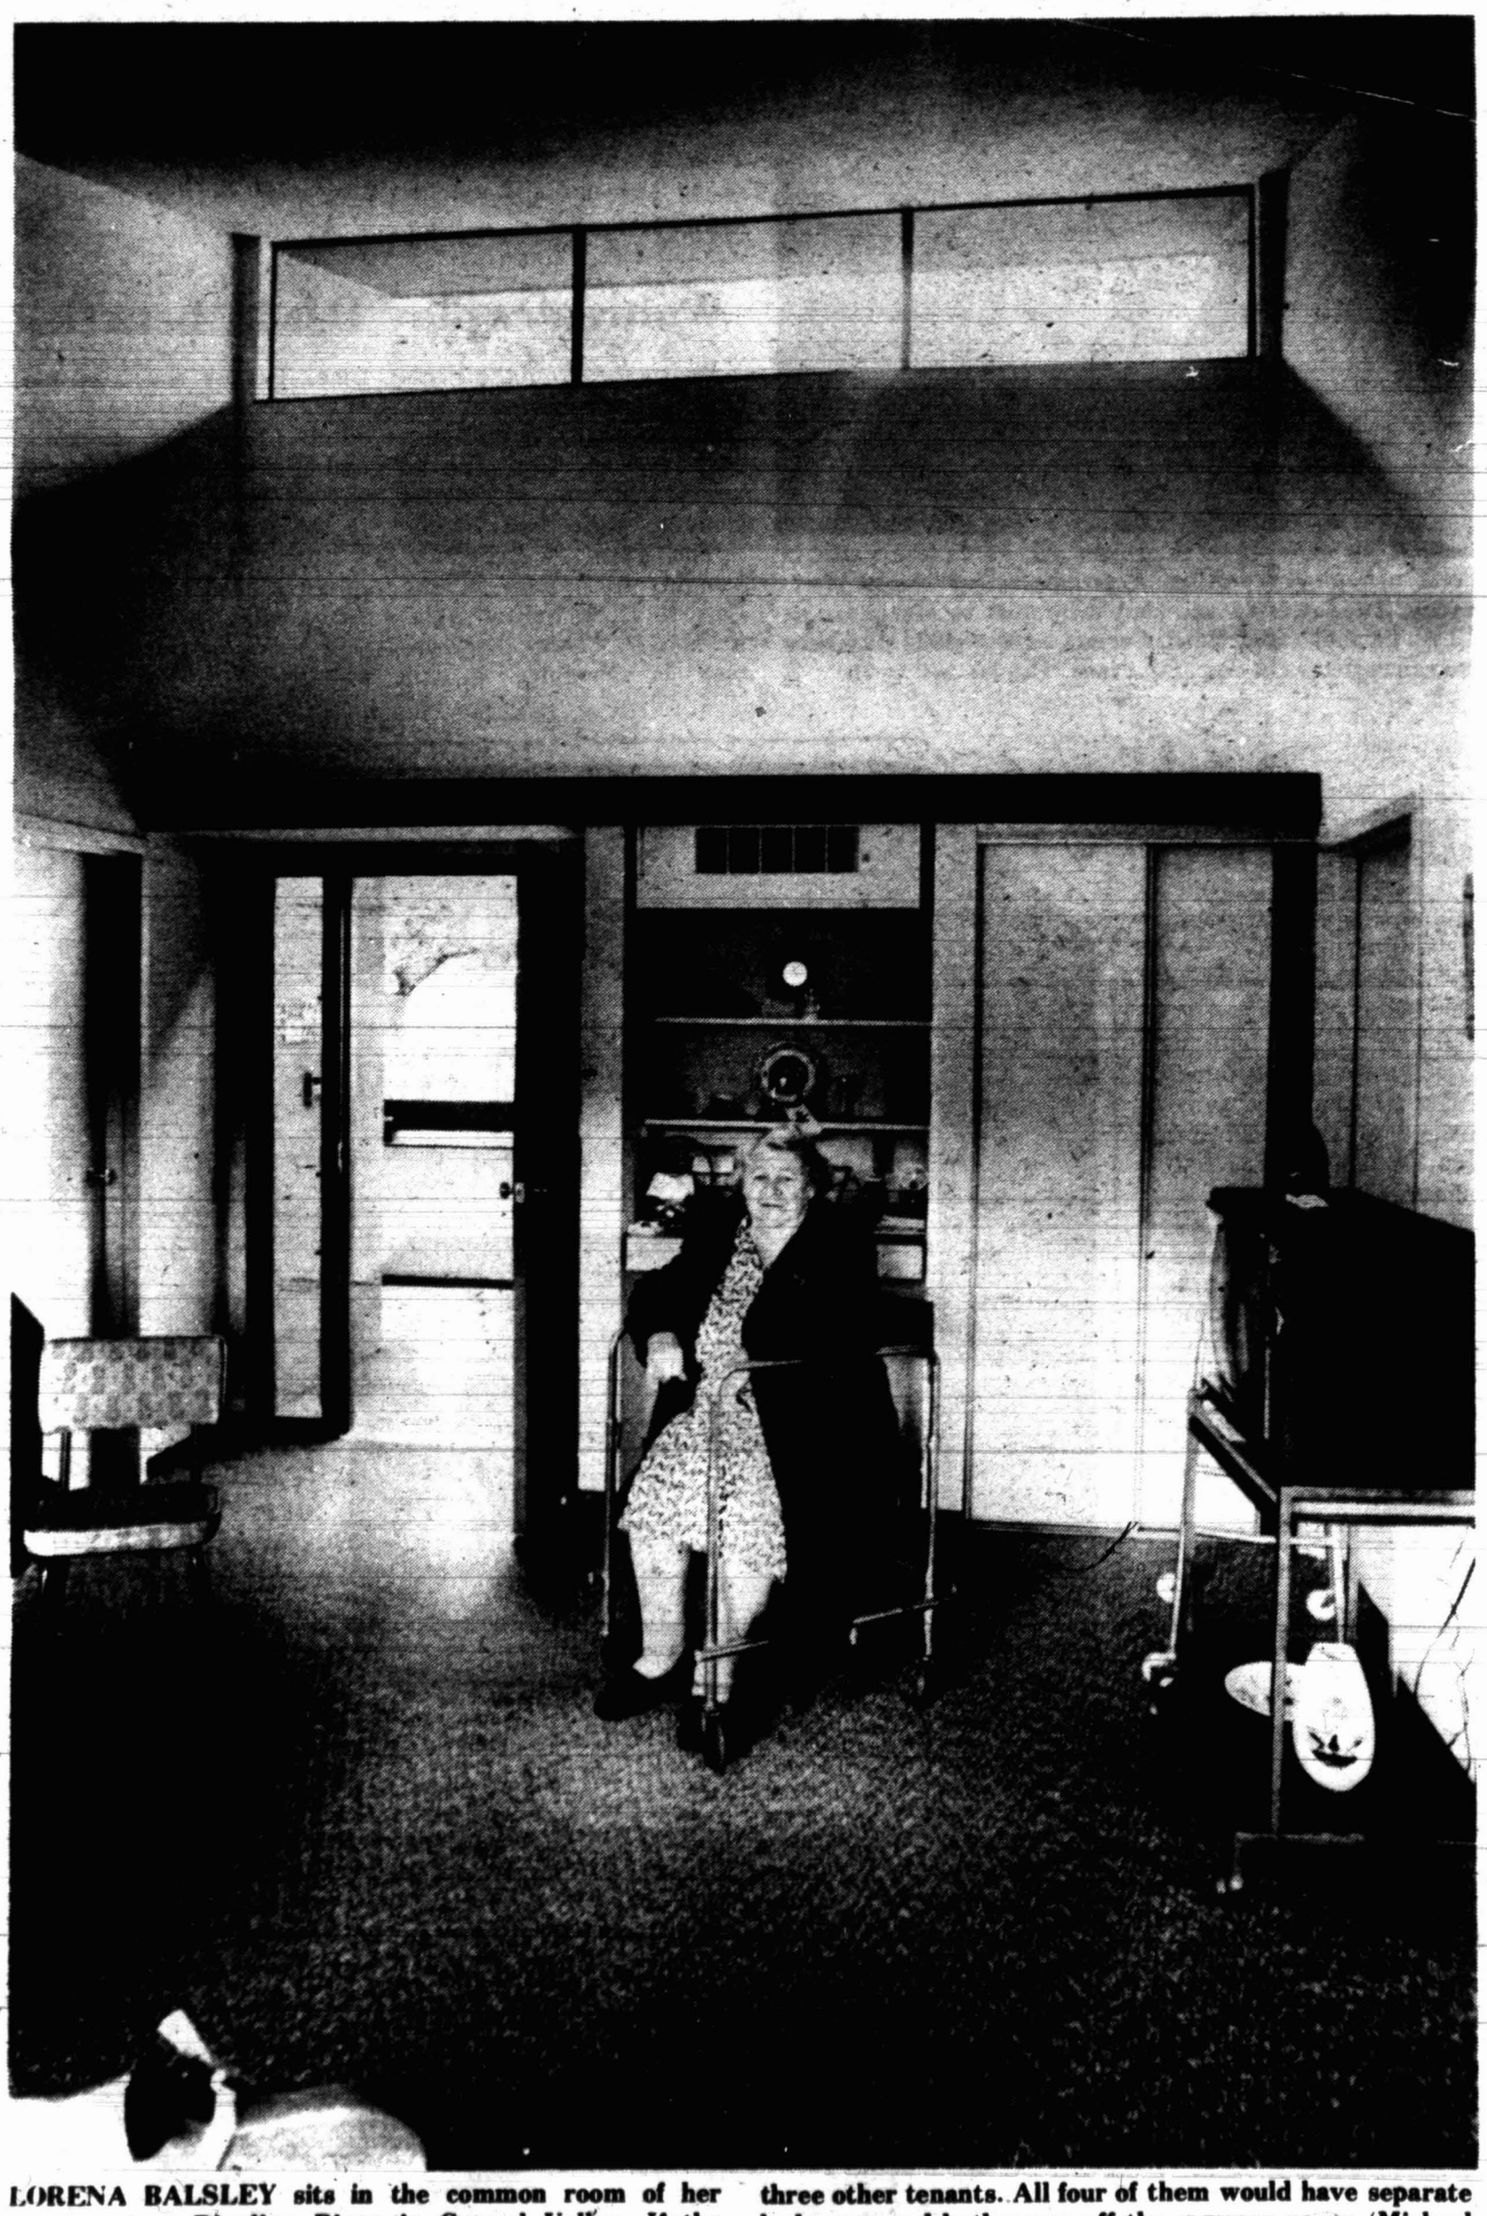
MISS HOLLOWAY cites figures from the California Association of the Physically Handicapped that put the U.S. handicapped population at 22 to 38 million. There are 1.8 million handicapped living in California alone, she said.

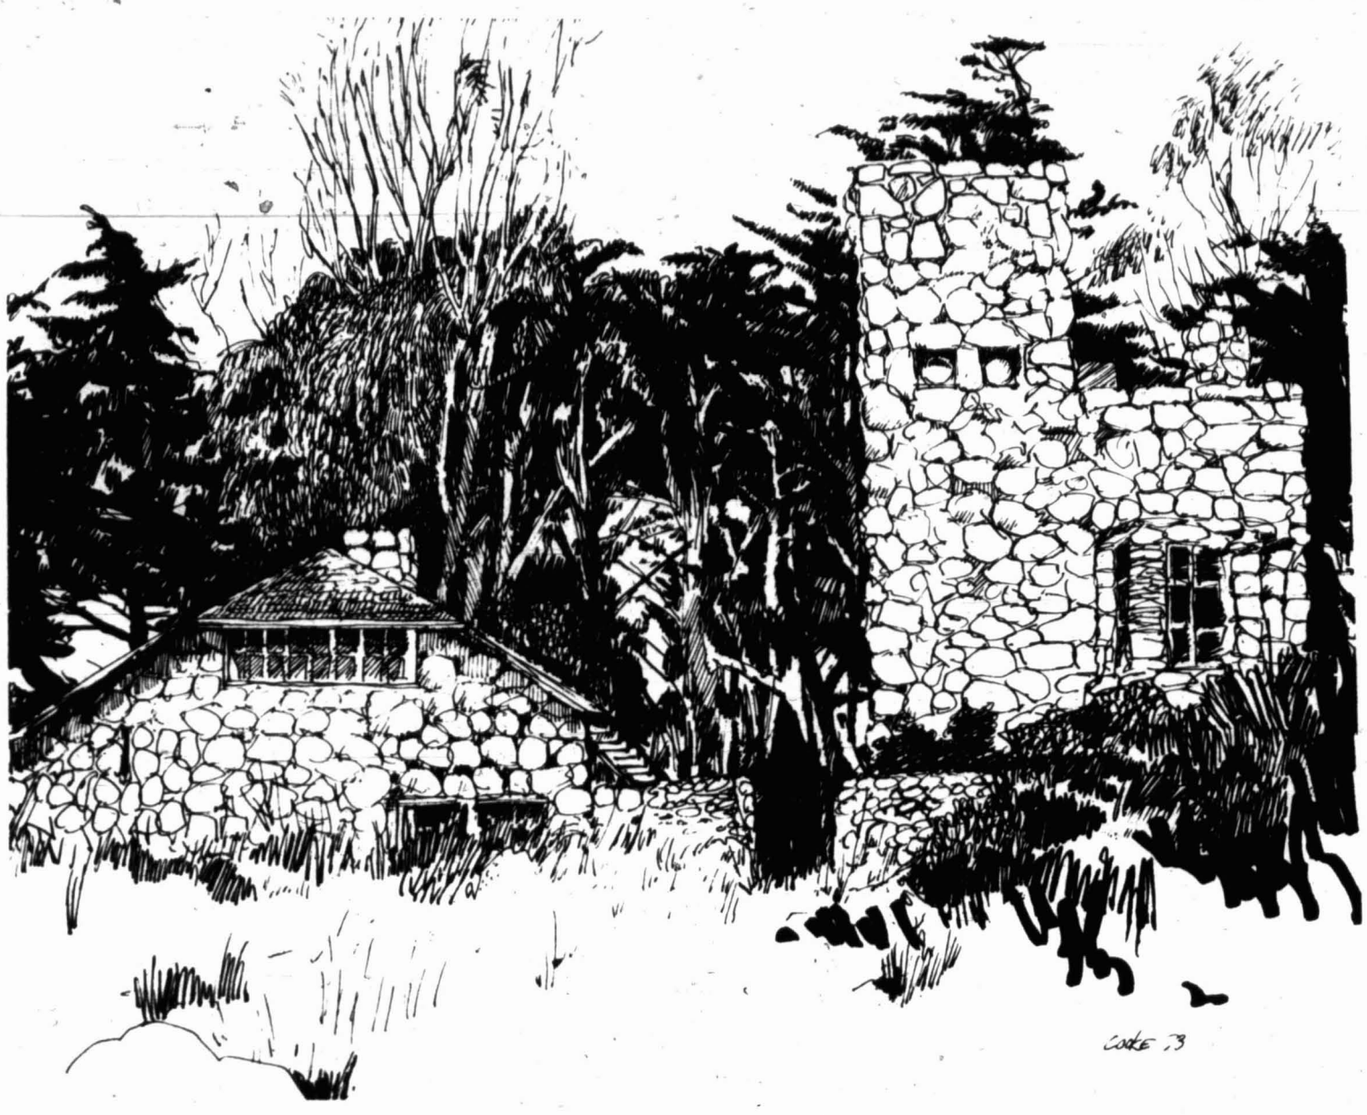
She believes enough of them need Rippling River to fill the center up—if they were aware the center existed and federal funds were available to underwrite the costs.

"They're willing to spend millions to make this a place for the elderly," Miss Holloway said. "Why not spend the same amount and use it as it was originally intended?

"Why do it for them and not for us?"



LORENA BALSLEY sits in the common room of her apartment at Rippling River in Carmel Valley. If the center were fully occupied, she would share this room with three other tenants. All four of them would have separate bedrooms and bathrooms off the common room. (Michael Stang photo)



"My fingers had the art to make stone love stone," wrote Robinson Jeffers of Tor House. He built much of the structure with his own hands. The landmark is threatened unless enough funds can be raised to preserve Tor House for future generations.

TOR HOUSE

If you should look for this place after a handful of lifetimes:
Perhaps of my planted forest a few
May stand yet, dark-leaved Australians or the coast cypress, haggard
With storm-drift; but fire and the axe are devils.
Look for foundations of sea-worn granite, my fingers had the art
To make stone love stone, you will find some remnant.
But if you should look in your idleness after ten thousand years:
It is the granite knoll on the granite
And lava tongue in the midst of the bay, by the mouth of the Carmel
River-valley, these four will remain
In the change of names. You will know it by the wild sea-fragrance of wind
Though the ocean may have climbed or retired a little;
You will know it by the valley inland that our sun and our moon were born from
Before the poles changed; and Orion in December
Evenings was strung in the throat of the valley like a lamp-lighted bridge.
Come in the morning you will see white gulls
Weaving a dance over blue water, the wane of the moon
Their dance-companion, a ghost walking
By daylight, but wider and whiter than any bird in the world.
My ghost you needn't look for; it is probably
Here, but a dark one, deep in the granite, not dancing on wind
With the mad wings and the day moon.

We need your help to save Robinson Jeffers' Tor House

Historic Tor House will go "on the block" unless the public is able to raise $100,000 by December 31. The National Trust for Historic Preservation showed its interest by donating funds to place an option on the property. Interested people can help save the great poet's home for future generations. Please help to avoid losing this priceless heritage forever.

A group of volunteers has formed a non-profit corporation to preserve Tor House. The people listed below believe Robinson Jeffers' Tor House is a symbol of the indominatable spirit that made our nation great.

Among the great creative people who made Carmel their home, this powerful poet was an individual of tremendous stature. He truly is the "Poet of Ecology." The message of his poetry is ever-more widely understood and accepted. His role in our lives is reflected in the growing environmental awareness of our nation.

In a resolution adopted recently, the Carmel City Council said: "Tor House has great architectural, historical and personal significance to people who live in and visit Carmel. Jeffers' art of making 'stone love stone' together with his poetic art should be forever in the public domain."

Our goal is $400,000. Part will be used to purchase the literary landmark; the remainder will be used for restoration and to establish Tor House as a literary center.

We need $100,000 by December 31 as a first installment payment. If we cannot exercise our option at that time, the property will be placed for sale on the open market.

Our need is immediate. Please help. Thank you.

THE VOICE OF THE WEST

Saving Tor House

THE EFFORT OF a group of Carmel citizens to save the famous Tor House on Carmel Point, which was the late poet Robinson Jeffers' do-it-yourself stone home, commands our admiration and support. Harold Gilliam described this civic movement in This World yesterday, and we were pleased to note that the National Trust for Historic Preservation has given things a boost by acquiring a one-year option to purchase the Jeffers property.

Meanwhile, the local preservationists have formed a non-profit foundation under the presidency of Fred S. Farr and have gone to work to raise $400,000 to purchase the property and permanently endow its maintenance and upkeep.

Jeffers is, of course, a major American poet, the poet of the Big Sur coast, and his Tor House is a familiar feature of the Carmel scene. Because it somehow symbolizes the strength of his poetry (as well as the strength of his arms in piling up those stones), we hope Carmelites will succeed in preserving it as a heritage.

Sanitary board learns

Marine life monitoring will cost $100,000

It probably will cost the Carmel Sanitary District $100,000 for a two-year program to monitor possible polluting effects of the district's sewage outfall line into Carmel Bay.

The district board of directors got that estimate Tuesday from Kinnetic Laboratories Inc., the Santa Cruz firm that has been studying the effects of district effluent on marine life in the bay for the past three years.

The study proposed by Kinnetic to meet requirements imposed by the state Water Resources Control Board also would measure the amount of pollution carried to the bay by the Carmel River.

THE TOTAL price for Kinnetic's work was put at $85,586. An additional $10,000 to $15,000 may be spent analyzing the data, probably by the district's consulting engineers, Kennedy Engineering.

After the initial study, continued monitoring would cost the district an additional $15,000 per year for an indefinite period.

The directors delayed until October giving Kinnetic approval for the program.

The district is under a state order to come up with a biological and oceanographic study of its sewage outfall. The requirement was imposed when the Water Resources Control Board agreed in June to allow district wastewater discharge in the bay on a seasonal basis.

DURING THE REST of the year, the district would have to find another place to dispose of the two million gallons of waste it handles should take more time to consider annexation, he said.

Brown, however, would take no public position on annexation. Neither would Councilmen Leslie Gross and Helen Arnold when questioned by the Pine Cone after the meeting. But Mayor Gunnar Norberg and Councilman Howard Brunn both sided with the proposal to annex.

"It will bring Carmel to its natural boundaries," Brunn said.

"In my view, all areas that call themselves Carmel something or other ought to be a part of Carmel," Norberg stated.

FINANCING THE expanded service presents a substantial revenue problem, Collins warned the councilmen, however.

"No property tax funds from the area annexed will be available to the city for a long time," Collins said. Stipulations of Proposition 13, the state property tax amendment, require that property taxes collected in that area be given to the county, he said. The city would, however, receive sales tax and hostelry taxes from the annexed areas, Collins added.

The annexed area should be "prezoned" under present Carmel zoning requirements, suggested Robert Stephenson, chairman of the Carmel Planning Commission.

Four areas are being studied for annexation—Mission Fields, Hatton Fields, Carmel Woods and Carmel Point. "What if some of the areas favor annexation, but others reject it?" asked Mrs. Arnold.

It's all or nothing, Collins indicated.

Forum on annexation moved to a larger hall

A public forum on the proposed annexation of 680 acres and 3,569 people to the city of Carmel has been rescheduled for Tuesday night at Sunset Theatre. It had been scheduled for Wednesday at All Saints' Episcopal Church, but organizers decided they needed a larger meeting room.

The forum, featuring panelists favoring and opposing the annexation plan, will begin at 8 p.m., according to William Doolittle of the Carmel Citizens Committee.

Panelists will include Supervisor Sam Farr of Carmel; Carmel City Administrator Jack Collins; attorney Donald Freeman, a resident of the unincorporated area who favors annexation; attorney Elwood J. Wilson, a resident of the unincorporated area who opposes annexation; and Michael Johnson, executive director of the Local Agency Formation Commission (LAFCO), the body which must approve the proposal before it can proceed further.

The forum is sponsored by the Carmel Citizens Committee. Doolittle will moderate the discussion.

Questions from the audience will be accepted in writing on question cards to be provided at the meeting.

Sunset Theatre, on San Carlos between Eighth and 10th, seats 733.

The annexation proposal was forwarded to LAFCO by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors on Aug. 22. The board asked that Carmel Point, Carmel Woods, La Loma Terrace, Hatton Fields, Mission Fields and the Mission tract be annexed to Carmel.

This would increase the city's population from 4,780 to 8,349 and its land area from 694 acres to 1,374 acres.

The city boundaries would stretch from Pescadero Canyon on the north to the Carmel River, and from Highway 1 on the east to the Pacific Ocean.

Johnson said Monday he intends to bring the matter to the LAFCO board in October.

Boy Scouts sign-ups scheduled

Boys aged 8 to 10 can sign up to join the Cub Scouts on Wednesday at four schools in Carmel and Carmel Valley. Older boys, aged 11 to 18, can sign up for the Boy Scouts the same day at the Boy Scout House in Carmel, Eighth and Mission.

Cub Scout sign-ups begin at 7:30 p.m. at Carmelo, Woods, River and Tularcitos schools. Sign-ups for Boy Scouts run concurrently.

Parents should come with their sons to the sign-ups, according to Steven D. Abell of Carmel, district executive with the Monterey Bay Area Council of Boy Scouting.

Jeffers tour space limited

One-third of the space available on the upcoming "Robinson Jeffers Country" bus tour has been filled. The tour is Oct. 3 and it will benefit the Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation, which is raising money to preserve the late poet's house at Carmel Point.

There is space for 100 people, according to G. William Gahagan, acting executive director of the foundation.

Tickets are $25. They can be obtained by phoning 624-1813.

Gross lists property interests

Leslie Gross, sworn in as a Carmel city councilman Sept. 5, filed his financial disclosure with the city clerk Aug. 25 as required by state law.

Gross' statement showed that he owns real estate property exceeding $100,000 in value. It is a house on the southwest corner of Casanova Street and Second Avenue.

It also said he has more than $100,000 equity on a house on Monte Verde near 11th Avenue. The statement said Gross receives monthly interest payments for a house on Guadalupe northeast of Sixth Avenue that he sold in 1975.

No investments were listed.

As an appointed councilman, he was required to file the financial statement 10 days prior to being seated. Gross replaced David Hughes, who resigned in August. Gross' term expires in March 1980.

Symposium scheduled on rights of residents

Problems of on-street parking, uncontrolled growth and tourist-oriented festivals will be discussed in Carmel on Friday, Sept. 22 by a panel of speakers.

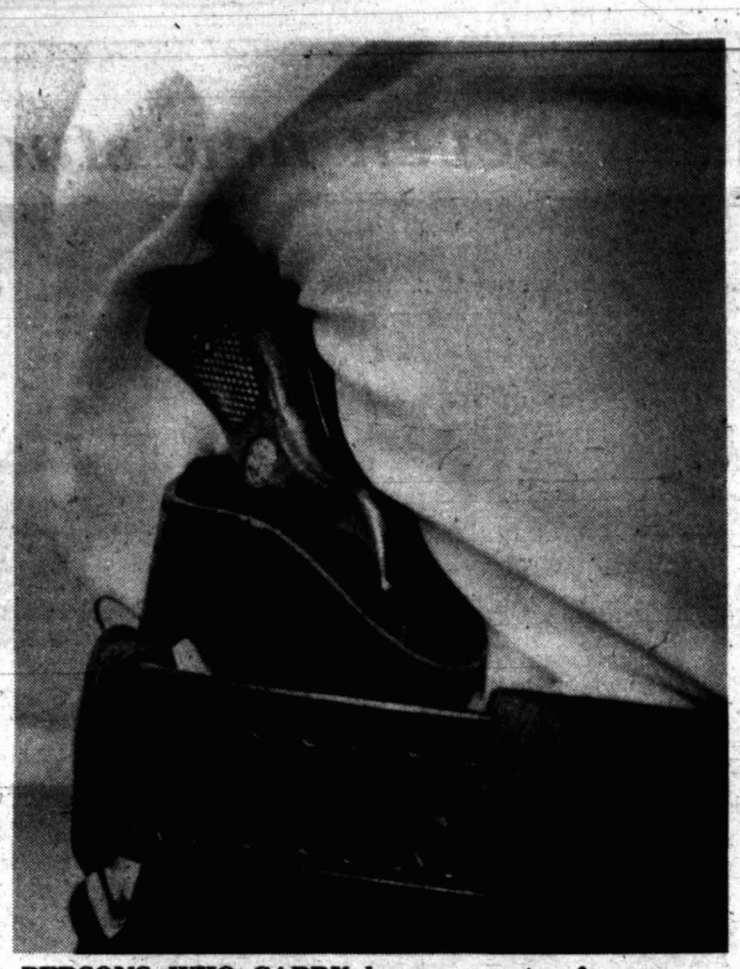
The symposium is entitled "Residents' Rights in Community Planning." It is sponsored by Old Carmel, the residents' lobby in Carmel.

The event starts at 7:30 p.m. in the parish hall at All Saints' Episcopal Church, Ninth and Lincoln. Admission is free and the public is invited. Refreshments will be served.

An on-street parking program that allows residents special privileges will be discussed by Ann Halsted, co-founder of the Telegraph Hill Neighborhood Association. The neighborhood in San Francisco has a program under which residents can park for extended periods without being ticketed.

Growth control will be the topic of Lawrence Klose, city attorney of Petaluma, the Northern California city that enforces a controlled growth policy upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The third speaker is David Klapp, a city planning commissioner from Los Gatos, the San Jose suburb where an annual wine festival was canceled after mounting complaints about rowdyism.



PERSONS WHO CARRY large amounts of money or valuables usually can get a permit to carry a concealed weapon in Carmel. Police Chief William Ellis said, however, many people are safer not carrying a gun.

Troop honors 13 Scouts

Thirteen Scouts from Carmel Troop 3 were honored recently at the Court of Honor that coincided with the second anniversary of the troop.

Honored were Van Crego, Mike White, Bret Sawyer, Clifton Bonner, Winston Aucutt, Siegfried Lackner, Addison Phillips, Steven Abell, Sean Gillis, Daniel Hu, Vlad Lewis, Jerry Hu and Phillip Wang.

Concealed weapons— 16 in town carry them with special permits

EVER WONDER how many people in Carmel have permission to carry a concealed weapon?

The answer is 16 and that includes two women.

Most of the group is composed of business people who carry large sums of money or valuable items like jewelry or rare coins.

Only concealed weapons need a permit. They are issued at the discretion of Police Chief William Ellis. Ellis said in an interview that he was confident those who carry a hidden weapon are capable of handling it safely.

"Some people come in and ask for a permit and they don't even know which end of the gun to fire," he said.

It is a misdemeanor to carry a concealed weapon without a permit.

Only the police chief and the county sheriff can issue permits. Yearly renewal is mandatory. If an owner cannot prove a continued need for the guns, the permits are revoked, Ellis said. Carmel's longest standing permit has been renewed annually since 1950.

Carmel police confiscate about three or four illegally concealed handguns a year, Ellis said. Most are found under car seats.

Ellis said he is "very strict" about who he permits to carry a concealed weapon. He issues permits only to individuals who carry large amounts of money or valuable merchandise.

"They also have to be proficient with the gun. If I don't know them or their ability, I'll take them down to the firing range and see how they handle it," he said. There is a practice range in the basement of the police department.

All applicants are fingerprinted. A three-week waiting period is required before permits can be issued. During that period, police check to make sure the applicant does not have a criminal record.

"Sometimes the concealed gun is a hazard to the person carrying it," Ellis stated. "Some women who would feel safer with a gun in their purse could find it would be more of a danger if an attacker turned the gun on them," Ellis said.

"I tell them to stick a good police whistle in their purses," he added.

Most local burglars do not carry guns, Ellis said. That is because they can be charged with an additional felony if they are found with the guns while committing crimes.

State law permits Ellis to issue up to three concealed handgun permits to a single person. Only one Carmel resident has more than one permit, he said. "The guy might want a lighter gun when he travels," he explained.

During his three-year tenure as chief, Ellis has renewed 13 permits and given three new ones.

Applicants are needed

Applications are available at City Hall for a position on the Carmel Planning Commission. The commissioner, to be appointed by the mayor and confirmed by the City Council, will serve the unexpired term of Leslie Gross, whose resignation from the planning commission became effective Sept. 5. Gross was appointed to serve the unexpired term of resigned City Councilman David Hughes. The commission term expires in 1980.

Applications will be accepted until Monday, Sept. 25 at 5 p.m.

Associate pastor to be guest of United Presbyterian Women

The United Presbyterian Women of Carmel will present the Rev. Joan E. Cathey as speaker at the first luncheon of the fall season next Thursday at noon in Westminster Hall. A fellowship hour at 11:30 a.m. precedes the luncheon. All women are invited to attend.

The Rev. Cathey is associate pastor of La Habra Hills Presbyterian Church and has previously had a career in public relations and journalism. She has published two books and numerous articles.

Luncheon reservations are needed at the Carmel Presbyterian Church office by Friday.

Mayor asks for an investigation of license fee inequities

A three-man mayor's committee was appointed Monday evening to look for inequities in the fees for Carmel business licenses.

The committee was told to report back in October. The members are Councilman Mike Brown; Merv Sutton, owner of Nielsen Bros. Market; and Arthur Strasburger, owner of Carmel Realty.

"It's not fair that certain businesses are inequitably treated, while other businesses come out 'clean' with low fees," Brown said.

All businesses in Carmel pay annual license fees, but under present ordinances grocers, for instance, pay up to 10 times more than physicians.

Real estate brokers pay a $75 flat fee, plus an additional $15 for each salesman. Accountants, attorneys, doctors and other professionals can elect to pay a flat $100-a-year fee or $1.50 per $1,000 of gross profits, with a $25 minimum. Most professionals choose to pay the flat fee.

But stores that sell groceries or drugs, as an example, have no option. They must pay $1.50 per $1,000 of gross profits. Sutton said it costs him more than $1,000 each year for his business license fees.

Councilman Howard Brunn, who has a real estate license, said the fee system is unfair. "I think the people in the real estate industry are ready to pay a more equitable fee," he said.

The low fees, said Brown, "are the one reason we find real estate offices budding up all over the place."

"I was told it would be totally and entirely illegal to use business license taxation for regulatory purposes," said Mayor Gunnar Norberg. The revenue must be related to the administrative costs of licensing, he said.

"All I want is that the burden of paying the fees be equitably shared," said Brown.

Renewed attempt to start minibuses

The Carmel City Council will step-up its attempt to start a minibus system. City Administrator Jack Collins is scheduled to report back to the council in October with recommendations from a consulting engineer who is studying a proposal for electric minibuses.

Collins is scheduled to meet Monday with Roy Renner, a consulting engineer from Sonora, to discuss technical background behind electric buses. Renner replaced Lawrence G. O'Connell of Livermore as the city's consultant, due to a conflict of interest. O'Connell has been hired by the federal government to decide which of 35 cities nationwide will participate in an experimental program of electric buses. Carmel expressed interest in the program in April.

"We need minibuses. We ought to get on with it," Councilman Howard Brunn said Monday at a council meeting. Brunn said the city should begin its own study concurrent with the federal one. Besides electric buses, the city also should examine hydrogen, diesel and gasoline-power buses, he said.

"We have the money to do it. The question is do the people out there want it?" Brunn said.

The council rejected a proposal in February 1977 for a local minibus service in conjunction with Monterey Peninsula Transit. Councilmen objected to the long-term financial commitment.

O'Connell said in May that Carmel could be experimenting with electric buses by late 1979.

Special state approval to continue some discharge is needed because Carmel Bay is a state Area of Special Biological Significance. In general, sewage discharge is banned by the state in such places.

Busiest planning panel on record, report says

CARMEL planning commissioners were the busiest on record spending an estimated 68 hours at 17 special sessions during the 1977-78 fiscal year.

The accounting of commission time was in Planning Director Robert Griggs' annual report released last week.

The commission recommended four zoning ordinance changes, compared to none the year before. It reviewed plans for only one new commercial building, compared to four the year before, according to the report.

In the past year, the commission recommended one change to the General Plan, Carmel's main planning document. Last year, no changes were recommended. There were seven public hearings before the commission in the past 12 months. That compares to four the year before. Guest house approvals decreased slightly. Five of seven applications were okayed this year. Last year, eight of 10 were approved.

THE PROBLEMS within the city have taken up most of the staff time and little participation has been given to matters of regional significance. It appears at this time that the next fiscal clearing up matters that have been placed in abeyance," the report said.

Issues the commission has held in abeyance include a study of historically significant buildings; a study of parking requirements for businesses with fixed seating and a proposal to rezone the Flanders mansion from residential to park use.

On May 1, the Carmel City Council directed Mayor Gunnar Norberg and Robert Stephenson, chairman of the planning commission, to draw up a list of priority planning actions.

17 special sessions took 68 hours

The two men have discussed the list once, Stephenson said. Norberg has selected his choice of priority items, but Stephenson has not.

"There are more important things in the wind," Stephenson said Friday. He cited as an example the ad hoc R-4 multi-residential district committee that he chairs. Stephenson said he does not know when the list will be completed.

THE COMMISSION'S study sessions and special sessions in the past fiscal year primarily were about "large houses" and the new R-4 district.

The R-4 multi-residential district was adopted by the council Aug. 7. It took effect Sept. 7. The "large house" issue was returned to the commission last week for more study. The commission will examine increasing coverage for one-story homes, and decreasing coverage for new two-story houses.

The other rezoning measure recommended by the commission and approved by the council this year was converting the Mission Trail Park from an R-1 residential to a P-1 park zone.

The one new commercial building that received design review conditional approval is the Monterey Savings and Loan Association office on San Carlos and Sixth Avenue. The plans still require final commission approval.

The design review board studied 186 agenda items in the past year, including landscape plans and building designs. It saw 151 sign and display case applications for businesses, and approved 120 of them.

Carmel won't quit AMBAG

Carmel won't drop out of the Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments. But the City Council will keep a "scorecard" on the favors it gets from the regional planning agency.

On a 3-2 vote, the council decided to pay its $2,850 dues through next June. But Mayor Gunnar Norberg and Councilman Howard Brunn, who voted to quit, said they wanted city aides to present a "scorecard" of AMBAG work that benefits the city. "We'll add it up one year from tonight," Brunn declared.

The regional agency has been rapped by the city administrator for being of "no particular benefit to Carmel."

Council annoyed by noise

A noisy motorcycle passed outside Carmel City Hall Monday, disturbing those attending the council meeting inside. Later, the council asked the City Hall staff to study noise standards for Carmel.

The request was made by Councilman Howard Brunn, who said Carmel was becoming too noisy. He blamed not only motorcycles, but also portable blowers used to clear away sidewalk debris.

The council had better study the noise its own public works department makes "beginning at sunrise every morning," said Kenneth J. Hardy, a Carmel resident who said he lives near the public works yard.

Although Carmel has no decibel limit, city ordinance does forbid outdoor amplified music within the city. The music is allowed indoors if it does not disturb neighboring businesses or residents.

The City Hall staff will check with the League of California Cities to compare standards of other cities in the state. No deadline was assigned to the study.

Would-be robber never passed note

"Please act natural. Hand over $600,000."

That is what a note said that was found on a bank counter after closing hours Friday by the Carmel branch manager of Crocker Bank, Sixth and Mission.

The note was found by Howard Sehlin, according to police. It was written on bank scratch paper.

Eviction suit is filed against Flanders tenant

CARMEL CITY Attorney George W. Brehmer has filed a complaint in Superior Court to force the eviction of Bradford Dow, the realty agent who leases the city-owned Flanders mansion.

The case is scheduled to go to trial Oct. 2.

Dow refused to move Aug. 15, when the city attorney said his lease expired. It already had been decided by the City Council that Jack Collins, the city administrator, would move into the mansion.

Dow's lease dates back to 1975. He has paid $400 a month, a price agreed upon after Dow said he would add some appliances and do repairs on the 50-year-old mansion.

The complaint, filed Aug. 18, also seeks damages of $30 for each day Dow occupied the house after Aug. 15 and rent that allegedly was not paid for a one-month period ending on May 15. The complaint also listed 18 household fixtures that need to be repaired.

Dow asked the city in June to let him stay until November, when a house he is building in Carmel Valley is scheduled for completion. Winter rains pushed back the completion date, according to Dow. His appeal for an extension was rejected by the city.

"I'm willing to fight it," Dow said of the suit, "because I feel I'm being pushed around." Dow said it was ridiculous for the city to seek his eviction when the court date is only a month before he will vacate the mansion.

Nuisance suit still not filed

BACK ON Aug. 14, the Carmel City Council told its attorney to file suit against Norbert Kammer. Kammer owns three shingle-frame buildings that were moved to the corner of Third and Lincoln in 1975, but still are perched on mover's blocks.

No court complaint had been filed as of Friday, however. Asked why, City Attorney George W. Brehmer said, "It's a matter of lots of things to do."

Instead, he has drafted an ordinance that would empower the city administrator to declare sites a public nuisance. The draft also gives the administrator the power to use city workers to clean up sites deemed to be hazardous and a public nuisance. If the site was not put in order after adequate notice, Brehmer said the administrator could dispatch city workers and bill the property owner for the work.

Decisions by the administrator could be appealed to the City Council, he said.

The draft is not expected to reach the Carmel City Council until late October, according to Brehmer.

Neighbors have been complaining about Kammer's property for several months. The city has allowed the slow pace of renovation because Kammer complied with a city law that requires some work to be done during a three-month period. Since August, Kammer has installed a fence around his property.

Holly Juergens of Carmel Valley is one of six amateur golfers who will play in the Sarah Coventry Golf Tournament that starts Thursday at Round Hill Country Club in Alamo.

Miss Juergens tied for the sixth berth after a qualifying round last week. She and Linda Bowman of San Rafael both shot 85s. They went into a sudden death play-off on the first hole. Miss Juergens beat Miss Bowman by one stroke, shooting a 4.

A business major at San Jose State University, Miss Juergens, 19, is the daughter of Vernon and Marcia Juergens of Tierra Grande. The family moved to Carmel Valley three years ago.

Earlier this year, Miss Juergens played in the U. S. Open Golf Tournament. She played on the men's golf team at Monterey Peninsula College for two years, and, prior to that, was the Iowa state champion golfer.

Televised coverage of the Sarah Coventry tournament is planned on Saturday and Sunday by KQED-TV, Channel 9, San Francisco. There is $100,000 in prize money offered and the tournament is part of the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour.

HUSBAND AND WIFE tennis team Vic and Yoko Taylor of Carmel won the West Coast Regional Lipton Mixed Doubles Championship Tournament at the Plaza Tennis Club in Pasadena recently. They defeated Charmaine Dadian of Torrance and Kerry Welsh of Redondo Beach in straight sets, 6-3 and 7-6.

The Taylors are competing in the national tournament of the Lipton World of Doubles at Woodlands Inn and Country Club in Woodlands, Texas.

Married for six years, Yoko and Vic met while playing tennis at a local tennis club. Yoko, 50, began playing nine years ago, but Vic, 48, began more than 25 years ago and was on the tennis team at the University of Denver.

Yoko credits their victories to the defensive strategy of ground strokes and lobs her husband has developed over the years. She said they play against much younger teams in many of the tournaments but come out on top.

FOR THE PAST year, Carmel has taken part in a county program that allows first-time offenders to work off fines or jail sentences.

So far, five adults and one juvenile have worked 134 hours in the program, mostly at the beach.

A report on their progress was presented to the Carmel City Council on Sept. 5.

It prompted Mayor Gunnar Norberg to observe, "Working for the city appears to be an appropriate alternative punishment to jail."

THE 1887 SHOP, a shoe store in Carmel Plaza, that specializes in Capezios, and Robinson Jeffers' Tor House Foundation have something in common—they both want the same telephone number.

G. William Gahagan, executive director of the foundation, said it wants the number 624-1887 because the last four digits coincide with the foundation's post office box number, which also is the birthday of poet Jeffers.

The shoe store would like that same number because it represents the year that shoemaker Salvatore Capezio started selling shoes.

Mildred DeLautey, owner of the shop, said she had been asking Pacific Telephone for that number for "16 years with no luck."

A Pine Cone employee dialed that number—it belongs to the Carmel Clinical Laboratory.

Jess Withington Coe was born Aug. 20 at Marin General Hospital in San Rafael. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Geoffrey Withington Coe of Sausalito. Geoffrey is the son of the late Marguerite Withington Coe of Carmel and the late Jesse Aeres Coe of Pebble Beach. Geoffrey graduated from Carmel High School in 1957.

Young Jess weighed eight and a half pounds at birth and was 22 inches long.

SAVORING THE team's third consecutive league championship are Dick Falge, father of a swimmer and a member of the Barracuda Boosters Club; Chuck McKay, president of the boosters club; and Larry Challis, the head coach emeritus who helped develop the Barracuda program. The league championship perpetual trophy was on display at the awards barbecue Saturday.

Barracuda swimmers savor championship, Toro Park barbecue

THE CARMEL Barracudas Aquatics Team hosted its annual awards barbecue at Toro Regional Park on Saturday. For the Barracuda team members, all aged 5 to 18, there were many awards to celebrate—Head Coach Emeritus Larry Challis proudly displayed the Coast Valley Aquatics League Perpetual Trophy which the swimmers won after claiming their third consecutive league championship; swimmers showed their parents and friends the first-place trophy awarded the Barracudas at the Santa Cruz Relays; and Waterama Chairman Dave Hardy presented awards for the top five fund-raisers before 20 swimmers received individual swimming awards.

"The 1978 league championship was especially gratifying for the Barracudas," said Hardy. Trailing for two days behind Gilroy and Morgan Hill, the Barracuda freestyle relay teams edged ever closer to the mark until, in the final event of the meet, Jeff Mink, Bruce Lathrop, Bob Dunn and George Lockwood each swam lifetime best times to snatch the victory for the defending champions.

This year's Waterama fund-raiser, critical to the continuation of the aquatics program, has raised some $6,200. Swimmers swam 19,048 lengths of the pool under the sponsorship of parents, friends, and businessmen in the community. Leaders receiving awards for their efforts were Ali Voskay, first with $650, followed by Ken Conklin, Mary McCormack, Amy Zoger and Matt Slautterback.

The highlight of the afternoon was the presentation of individual swimming awards. Coaches awards were presented to individuals in the several age groups who had demonstrated superior sportsmanship, leadership and performance throughout the year.

This year's recipients and their age groups were: twin sisters Tanna and Hailey Franke (8 and under); Erika Radon and Greg Falge (9 and 10); Lisa Marie Paik and Sean Mullen (11 and 12); Sarah Swift Hicks and Mike Hardy (13 and 14); and Stacey Hicks, Bob Dunn and Steve Allard (15 to 18).

This year's recipients of the Most Improved Swimmer awards were Monica Reardon and Jeff Lewis (8 and under); Erica Olin and Andrew White (9 and 10); Indi Zeleny and Hoff Brooks (11 and 12); Colleen Lee and Susan Lockwood (13 and 14); and Bruce Lathrop (15 to 18).

Finally, 18-year-olds George Lockwood, Jeff Mink, Steve Allard, Bob Dunn and Andy Ek-Udom Charaljavanaphet, who have completed their final year with the team, received congratulations from coaches Larry Challis, Alex Wilsdon, Cathy Proulx, Rich Holine and Bob, Chrissy and Kathy Walthour.

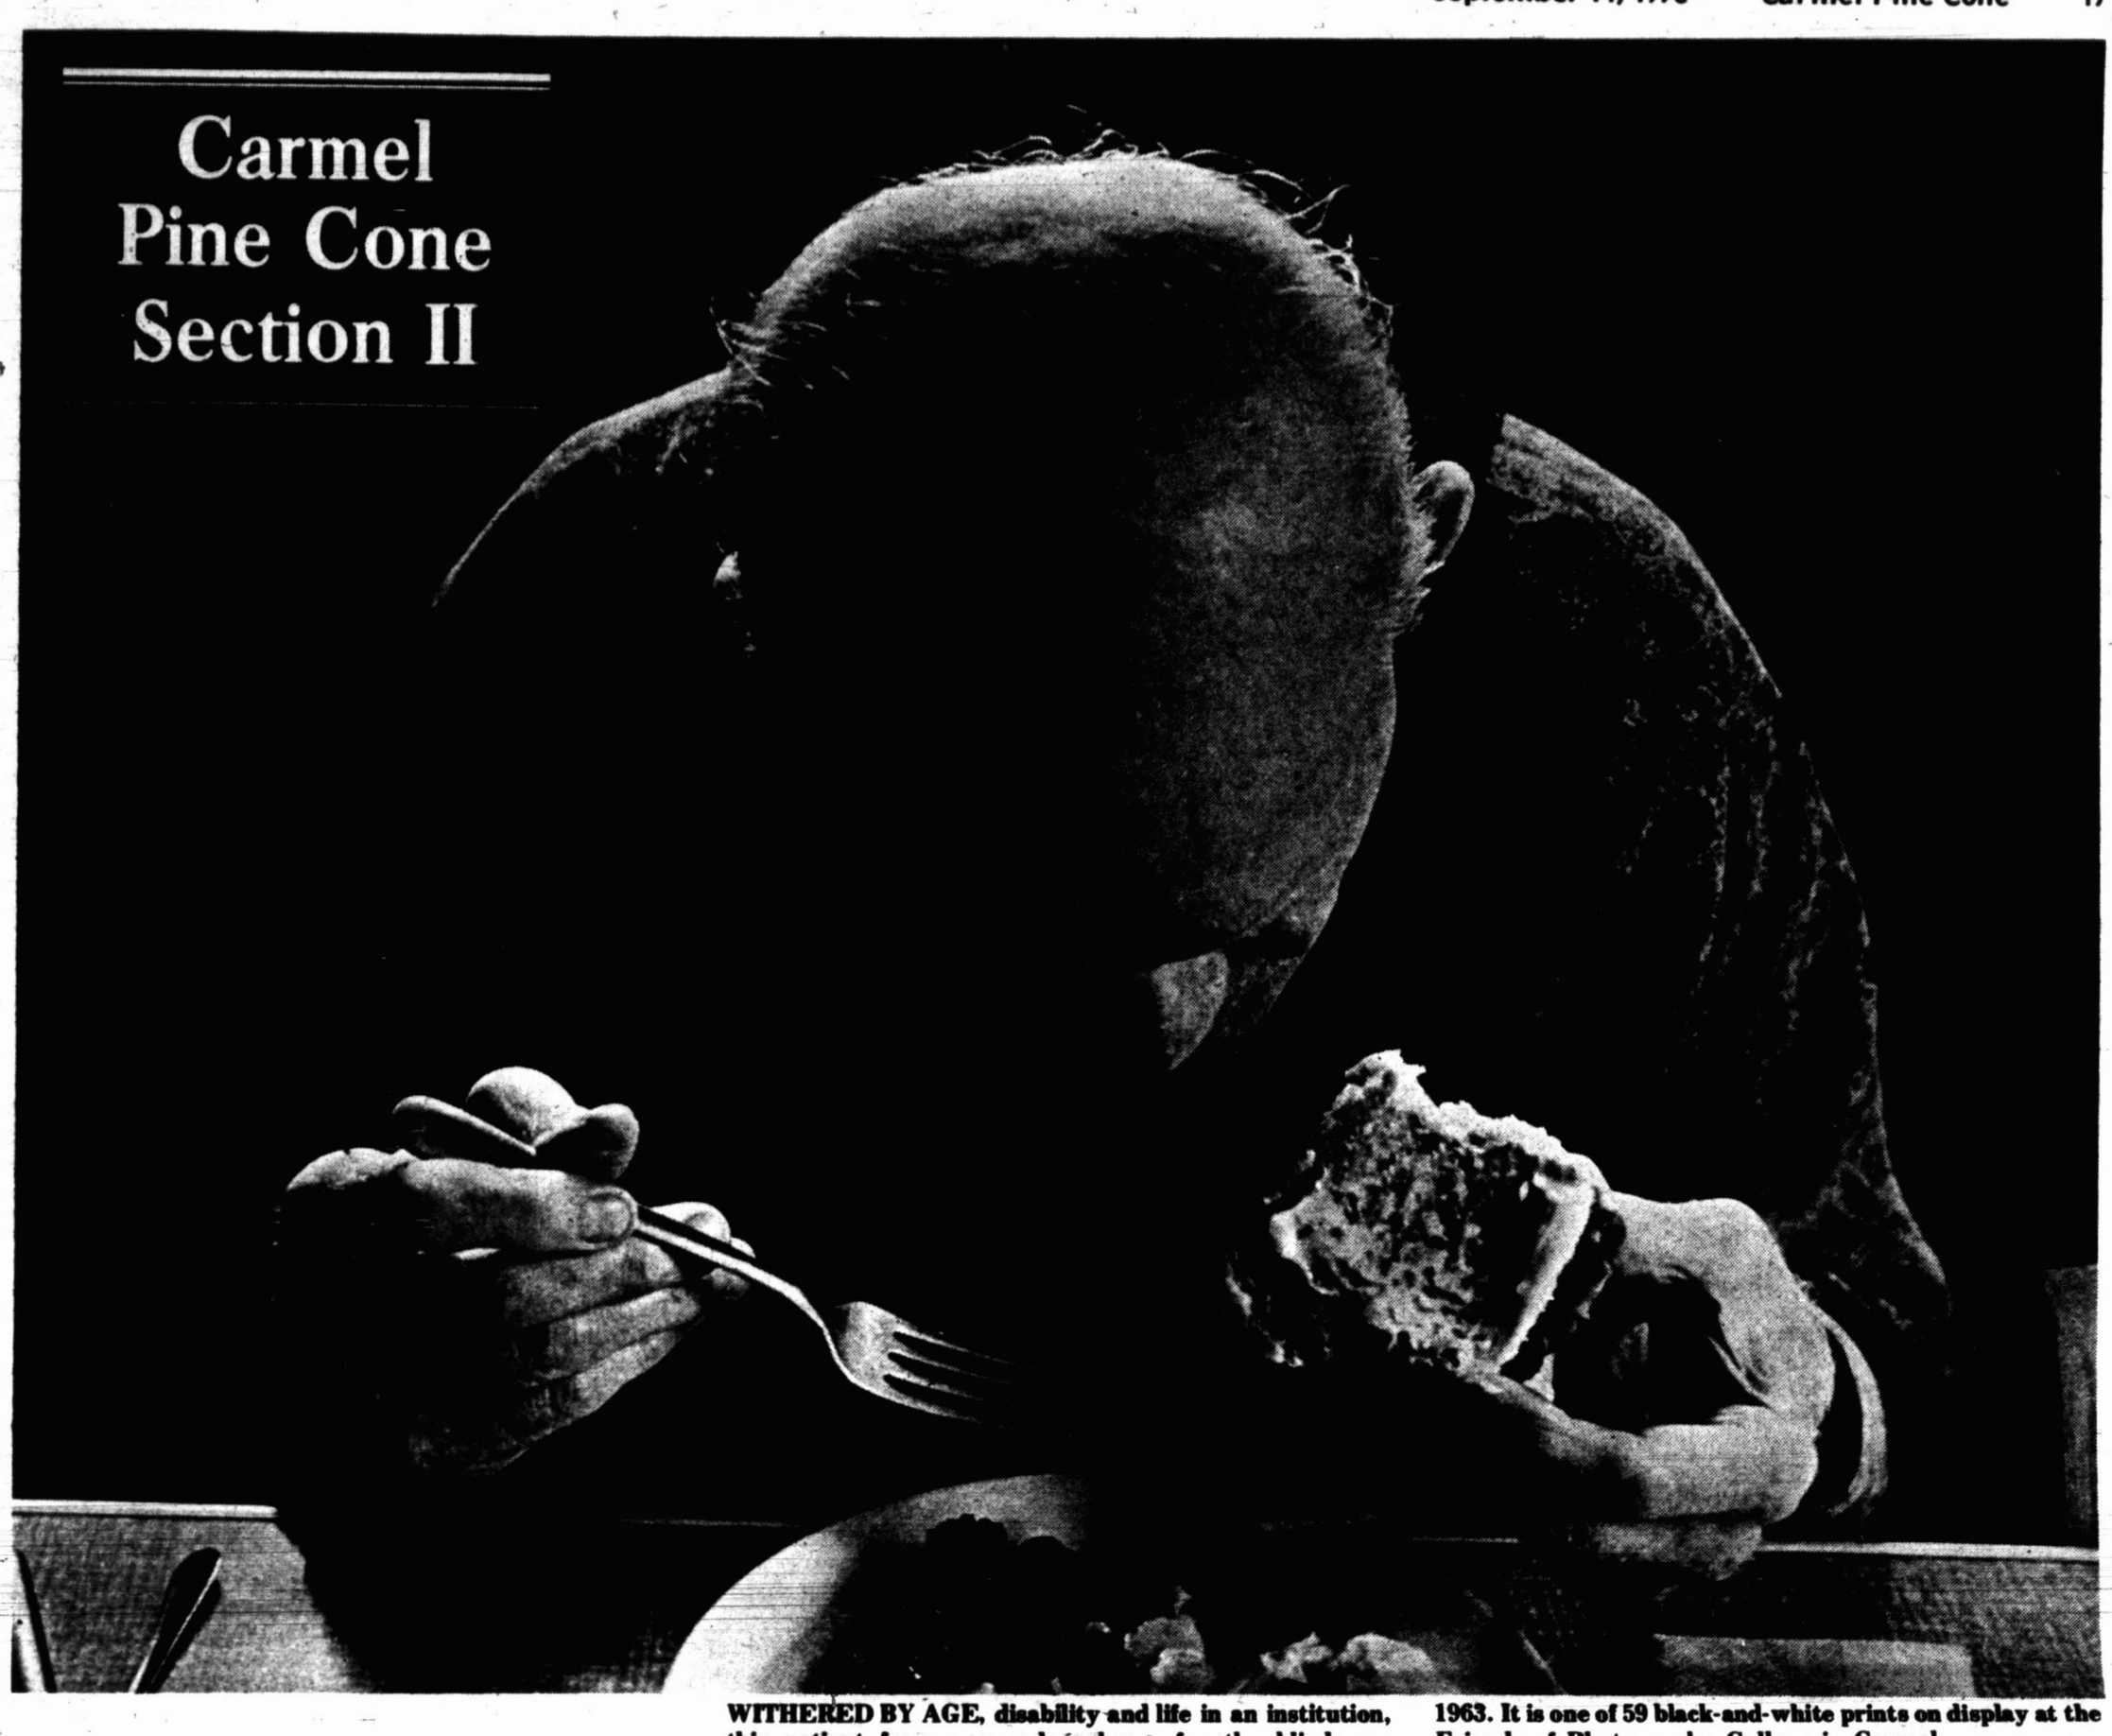
Carmel Pine Cone Section II



WITHERED BY AGE, disability and life in an institution, this patient from a nameless home for the blind was photographed by Jerome Liebling in St. Paul, Minn., in 1963. It is one of 59 black-and-white prints on display at the Friends of Photography Gallery in Carmel.

Liebling photographs at Friends Gallery

A retrospective exhibit of photographs by Jerome Liebling will remain on view through Sunday at the Friends of Photography Gallery in Sunset Center.

Included in the exhibit are his portraits of the people of New York City, from 1947 to the present; his 1962 "Slaughterhouse" series of photographs taken in the slaughterhouses of South St. Paul; photographs of the residents of a home for the blind; revealing shots of major American political politicians; portraits of a group of elderly handball players; and a shocking group of photographs of cadavers, taken in New York City in 1973.

Liebling, an active photographer and filmmaker for more than 30 years, studied at Brooklyn College and taught photography at the University of Minnesota and Yale University before taking his present post at Hampshire College in Amherst, Mass.

While a student at Brooklyn College he met Walter Rosenblum and joined the Photo League, then became one of the first students at the Film Workshop.

When he was hired by the University of Minnesota at the age of 25 to teach photography, he met Allen Downs, with whom he made many prize-winning films, including Pow-Wow, The Tree Is Dead, The Old Man and 89 Years.

Estelle Jussim, in an essay included in a catalog of photographs from the exhibit, says, "Far beyond the conventional meaning of politics, and much closer to a sense of religious devotion to humanity, are those remarkable handball players, those half-naked septuagenarians who stride toward us with such nobility and dignity that they are the equals of classic Greek statues. Here I experience that same sense of awe and admiration when I first saw Pablo Picasso, through the eyes of David Duncan, as an incredible old man whose strength and virility remained until death. Although Liebling has much work ahead of him, I suspect these handball players of his will stand as his most consistently noble achievement. He has managed, by some telling combination of light, form, stopped motion, significant shadow, to make heroic figures out of retired salesmen, clothiers and waiters. Liebling is not enshrining his handball players. He simply loves them."

The exhibit and the catalog are supported in part by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts.

For more information, phone 624-6330.

A STREET URCHIN in New York stared balefully at Liebling in 1948, when he shot this timeless photograph.

Inglenook was the host for a musical winetasting

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

IT IS THE eve of Inglenook vineyards centennial year—Capt. Gustav Niebaum, a Finnish sea captain who had made his fortune in fur-seal trading in Alaska, elected to establish his home at Rutherford in California's Napa Valley in 1879. The three-story American Gothic stone structure, masked in ivy, still holds its handsome German oak oval casks which came around the Horn in the last century. Wine is aged here, but made in another facility only a few miles down the road in Oakville.

The wine connoisseur

The big changes at Inglenook, from the time of the founder and his heir, the late John Daniel Jr., Niebaum's grandnephew, began in 1964 when Daniel sold the historic property to United Vintners, from which it was subsequently acquired by Heublein.

The 40,000-case production jumped prodigiously under the new ownership, the revered Inglenook name as a brand riding on the labels of grapes that never saw the Napa Valley. Jug wines titled Inglenook Navalle then and now emerged from Asti and Madera, competing with San Joaquin Valley wines.

Many wine writers have perpetuated the error that "Navalle" comes from the name of a creek which winds through the old Inglenook ranch. The truth is much simpler. Thirty years ago, when John Daniel first used the name on a label, I asked him about it, and in his easy going manner he told me, "It's just a contraction of Napa and Valley—Navalle. I thought it had a good sound to it."

THE COMMERCIAL abuse of the Inglenook name disenchanted many of the loyal devotees of the high-quality standards established and held by the founders and John Daniel following the repeal of Prohibition. Independently wealthy, Daniel never looked to his winery as a source of major income. But his wines were superb. The Cask Bottlings of his Cabernet Sauvignon vintages still fetch record prices when they appear in the Heublein annual auctions.

Seeking to recover from the strategical error made in the marketing ploys of the late '60s, in 1971 one of the graduate enologists of UC Davis, Tom Ferrell, became the youngest winemaker of a major winery in the world. He immediately went to work with splendid new equipment, additional facilities and fine sources of Napa Valley grapes beyond the old Inglenook ranch, producing both red and white wines of outstanding merit.

Ferrell has a particularly sensitive talent with white wines, the first Johannisberg Riesling and Gewurztraminer showing at once his skills. An oak-finished Chardonnay soon brought the wine lovers back into a new reverence for Inglenook Estate-Bottled wines.

DOUGLAS BELL, the marketing director of Inglenook Vineyards, was moved a couple weeks ago to tap the magic of music to sell wine, in particular some distinguished new Estate Bottled wines, conceived an evening in a private room of the posh Jimmy's restaurant in Beverly Hills, during which the language of wine would have a correlative interpretation in the language of music.

The guest list combined an unusual mix of wine lovers, beyond the usual wine and food writers drawn from the trade lists. Rather promptly after the vin de reception, a White Pinot was served with oysters on half shell and smoked salmon in the entry foyer, the guests were moved into the dining salon for the heart of the evening, where handsome printed programs and the presence of a grand piano told us something of a unique dimension was ahead of us.

When I first saw Henri Temianka, the conductor of the California Chamber Symphony among the guests, I knew the quality of the music would be nothing short of an incomparable virtuosity.

After a few words from Ferrell, explaining the delicately dry 1977 White Pinot, (4.50), produced from Chenin Blanc grapes without any residual sweetness, conductor Henn Temianka introduced Louise Di Tullio, who played the lyrical En Bateau of Debussy. A 1977 Fume Blanc, ($4), of Sauvignon Blanc grapes, aromatic and almost herbaceous, was interpreted musically with the Chopin Waltz in C Sharp Minor by Chet Swiatkowski at the concert grand, accompanied after by a creamy, delicate cucumber soup.

IF MOZART had not loved wine," Maestro Temianka averred, "we might not have had Don Giovanni!" Temianka next selected for his own violin solo Sarasate's Malaguena—the "girl from Malaga"—full-bodied and passionate, as the musical counterpart of Ferrell's 1977 Blanc de Noir, ($5.50), a very full-bodied, pink-tinged wine made in the white wine techniques from the black Burgundian grape. The chef served Lake Superior Whitefish Saute Veronique, necklaced with seedless green grapes.

Eddy Manson, an Oscar-winning virtuoso of the harmonica, held his audience spellbound with his performance of Enesco's Rumanian Rhapsody, which accompanied the 1974 Charbono, ($5.50).

Temianka's muted violin performance of Schumann's Traumerei combined ethereally with Ferrell's new and lusciously fruity Muscat Blanc ($9.50).

When you find these July- and October-released wines of Inglenook at your wine merchant, you might just want to pour them as you unleash some of your favorite rhapsodies to accompany them.

'Absurd Person Singular' opens Fri. at Studio

Alan Ayckbourn's comedy of the British class system, Absurd Person Singular, opens Friday, Sept. 15, at the Studio Theatre/Restaurant, Dolores between Ocean and Seventh, Carmel.

The play will be staged Friday-Sunday evenings with dinner served at 7 p.m. and curtain at 8:30 Friday and Saturday evenings. Both are one hour earlier Sunday.

Absurb Person Singular takes the audience on a visit to three couples in their three kitchens on three successive Christmas Eves. First are the "lower-class" but very up-and-coming Hopcrofts in their bright, new, gadget-filled kitchen where they are anxiously giving a little party for their bank manager and his wife and an architect neighbor and his wife.

The second year, the play moves to the architect and his wife in their neglected and untidy flat, and the third year, the bank manager and his wife are shown in their large, slightly modernized Victorian kitchen.

Running like a dark thread through the wild comedy of behind-the-scenes disasters at Christmas parties is the story of the advance of the Hopcrofts to material prosperity and independence and the decline of the others.

Screaming Memes are funny, inventive

By BARBARA MOUNTREY

If you ever knew and loved The Committee, San Francisco's famous improvisational theater group, go see the Screaming Meme Theater Collective. If you were never lucky enough to see The Committee, go see the Screaming Memes anyway. They are a talented, imaginative crew bursting with infectious energy.

The material of the seven-member group ranges from agitprop skits on developers and utility companies to interpretations of audience members' dreams; their music, from William Byrd to Holly Near—both on the subject of rape. The three young women—Celeste Tielz, Sherry Davis and Barbara Scott—are remarkably accomplished madrigal singers, a somewhat surprising bonus.

As with any improvisational theater, the show will change at every performance, since many of the skits depend on suggestions from the audience. Since the group has worked together in Santa Cruz for two years, they are attuned to each other's abilities and attitudes; but every show is bound to have surprises for both audience and performers. Every audience suggestion is a challenge as well as a help; every successful response from the actors is a joy to them as well as to those watching.

The Memes draw energy from the audience and return it at least sevenfold, transmuting isolated concepts such as a suggested place, a relationship and a newspaper headline into a more or less coherent dramatic scene. They are knowledgeable about history, "herstory" and tomorrow's headlines. Their didactic material, a reminder of their street theater days, can be a bit long-winded and heavy-handed, but they hit their targets with pointed, sometimes deadly, accuracy.

Their non-political material has a cheerful, slightly self-mocking quality about it. Anyone who drives down Highway 1 will be grateful for the whole new vocabulary of gestures with which to explain to hitchhikers why one is not picking them up, simple gestures and facial expressions to convey such messages as "This weed is too good to share with strangers," "I just had a fight with my boyfriend and I'm too bummed out to talk to anybody," "You look too weird" and "No dogs!"

The Memes' props are scanty, their costumes an assortment of hats; but, with the aid of Ross Brown on lights, they create truly living theater.

The Screaming Meme Theater Collective plays Tuesday and Wednesday evenings at 8:30 p.m. at the Theatre in the Barnyard, Highway 1 and Rio Road, Carmel, through September.

Theater review

Fishermen to honor Santa Rosalia Sun.

The blessing of the Monterey Bay fleet and traditional tribute to the patron saint of Italian fishermen will be celebrated at the Santa Rosalia Festival Sunday, Sept. 17, in Monterey.

The annual event, sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Italian Heritage Society, blends the "fishermen festival" of the turn-of-the-century commercial fishing industry and the "blessing" of the fishing boats, begun in 1935 when a statue of Santa Rosalia was given to San Carlos Cathedral in Monterey.

Festivities begin at 10 a.m. with the Santa Rosalia Parade from the Armed Services YMCA, El Estero and Webster, to the Custom House Plaza at Fisherman's Wharf. Colorful floats, bands and marching units accompany the beautiful statue as it is carried along the Alvarado Street parade route.

At the Custom House Plaza, the Most Reverend Bishop Harry Clinch will celebrate an outdoor mass at 11 a.m., during which the Queen of the Festival will crown the statue of Santa Rosalia with a wreath of flowers.

Following mass, fishermen carrying the statue will lead the procession to Old Fisherman's Wharf where Bishop Clinch will conduct the traditional blessing of the fishing craft and sportsmen's boats. The Queen will then lay a wreath of flowers in the bay in memory of fishermen lost at sea.

For the rest of the afternoon, Custom House Plaza will be alive with music, song and the hum of activity as visitors view and sample the wares of booths offering Italian delicacies including calimari, pizza, spaghetti, canolli and Italian pastries.

The entire day's program is free, except for food and beverages.

For more information, phone 372-9118 or 372-4791.

'Music Man' has unsophisticated charm

By BARBARA MOUNTREY

Close to 100 people fill the Hidden Valley stage with laughter, song and dance in the Jamesburg Players' production of Meredith Willson's The Music Man. The story of a con man who benefits the community in spite of himself, Music Man is set in River City, Iowa, in 1912. It's a simple story with a happy ending, peopled by stock characters such as the prim librarian, the slick city feller, the matchmaking mother and the wisecracking little brother. But it has an unsophisticated charm most appropriate for the rural community producing it.

Michael Halton is a handsome, charming Harold Hill; Elizabeth Mitchell is Marian the librarian, the sweet young piano teacher whose heart he wins. Her voice is somewhat insecure, apparently as a result of opening-night nerves, but as an actress she is direct and lovely.

Some of the best singing of the evening is performed by John Macy, Stan Coffee, J. Paul Ingram and Ed Armstrong as the members of the school board who form a barbershop quartet at the instigation of "Professor" Hill. One of the ongoing themes of the show is Hill's ability to get the group to burst into song at the drop of a phrase, thus sidetracking them from their mission to get his credentials.

The most winning character in the show is Michael James, as Marian's lisping little brother, Winthrop. Remarkably natural for a child actor, he easily wins sympathy and support from those onstage and off. Regina Clegg has some very nice moments as Amaryllis, the little girl who adores him.

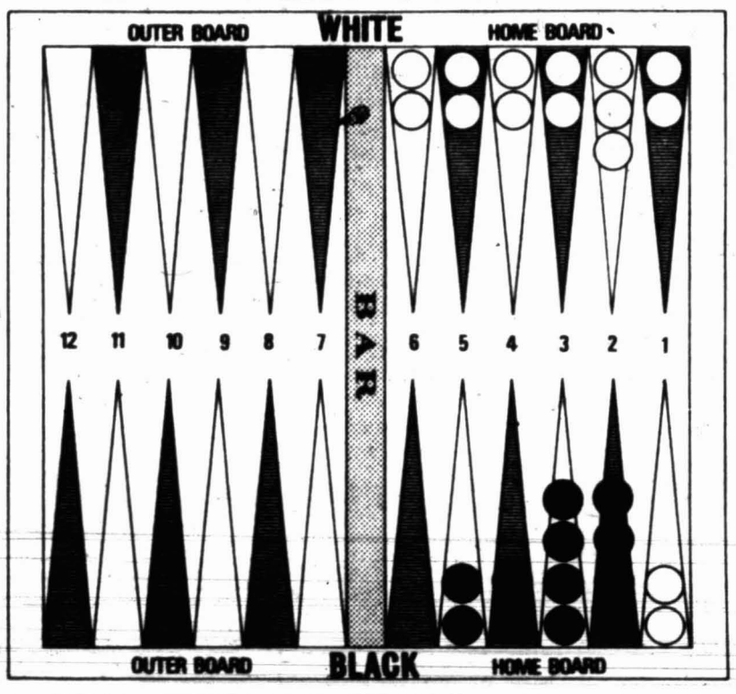
Paul D'Orazio sings and acts with ability and energy as Marcellus Washburn, former con man gone straight. Clancy Van Horn is very funny as the bumbling Mayor Shinn, given to constant malaprops, and Franci Fawley uses a foghorn voice and elegant mannerisms to caricature his small-town-snobbish wife, Eulalie Mackecknie Shinn. Toohey Davis is most amusing as their excitable daughter Zaneeta, in love with the young tough from the wrong part of town, Tommy Djilas, played by John Littlewood.

The show is produced and directed by the founders of the Jamesburg players, Linda and John Prejean (he also plays salesman Charlie Cowell). All proceeds from the show will be used to build a school for the children of Jamesburg, who must now ride several hours to and from school in the Valley.

The Music Man plays Thursday through Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m. at Hidden Valley Music Seminars, Carmel Valley Road and Ford Road, Carmel Valley Village.

Backgammon

By OMAR SHARIF



Black rolls 2-2. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

Has someone left some Black men off the diagram, or is this a joke? Black is ahead in the game and has rolled an excellent number which would allow him to bear off four men from the 2-point and come close to insuring a gammon. So what's the problem?

If you want to look at it like that, then there's no problem. For White will surely need five or six rolls to bring both men round the board and bear off a checker to save the gammon, while Black should succeed in getting all his men off in four or five rolls.

However, let's not overlook the forest for the trees. The main aim of a game of backgammon is to win. To win a gammon is a secondary consideration.

If Black bears off four men and White can maintain his two checkers on Black's 1-point, there are some numbers at Black's next roll that would be very bad for him. For example, many rolls including a 4 or a 5 would force Black to leave a blot, and in some cases he might have to leave repeating blots. Not only would that let White get back into the game; in some cases it might even cost the game.

A far safer way to play 2-2 is to clear both the 5- and 4-points, bringing the men to the 3- and 2-points, respectively. Now, to get a shot, White will have to leave with one of his runners and Black will have to roll badly.

Black should go on to win in peace and comfort, with gammon still a slight possibility.

Leonard Bernstein at 60-- he has never been dull

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

THREE WEEKS ago Leonard Bernstein turned 60. The occasion was honored in many quarters, a gala birthday party in New York leading the list. Deutsche Gramophon brought out a new record album with Bernstein conducting his three symphonies and the marvelous Chichester Psalms. Columbia records produced a 45-minute documentary of Bernstein's multi-faceted career, with many aspects of it articulated by Bernstein himself. And High Fidelity published, in its August issue, a comprehensive retrospective by John Ardoin.

Music corner

Ardoin describes Bernstein as "part sophisticate, part kid, part businessman, part traditionalist, part explorer. He is loved, put down, honored, and distrusted." Ardoin adds, "His personality is as outsized as his talent." And he so aptly sums it up, "Say what you will about the Bernstein years, one thing is certain: they have not been dull."

While Leonard Bernstein is plenty of grist for anyone's mill, let us narrow our investigation to Bernstein's six lectures at Harvard delivered in 1973 as that year's Charles Eliot Norton Chair of Poetry. In his article Ardoin makes scanty reference to "the groundbreaking, freewheeling Norton Lectures at Harvard, the importance of which has still not been fully gauged."

Perhaps Ardoin is right if that evasion is based on Bernstein's conclusion about music's future directions, but as they stand the lectures are certainly among the most interesting and provocative semi-scholastic statements about music made in the last decade at least. A "time will tell" position is rather a dust-off of something that many music lovers will find stimulating and comforting, not unlike Bernstein's music.

THE PUBLISHED version is called The Unanswered Question, a 400-page book and three small LP records of various statements and illustrations from the lectures that clarify for the musically untrained some of the points made in the text (Harvard University Press; $20.00). In the first place, the lectures are pure Lenny. Virtually every conclusion that allows any interpretation is qualified through personal, subjective experience. (This, after all, is a key to the style of Bernstein's successful television forays into music education.) But at the same time the total presentation is skillfully organized and integrated. In general it is a mix of basic music theory and abstract, personal conjecture. It becomes ultimately a verbal apology for Bernstein's own music, as it should, and further unites the personality and its esthetic.

But the speculations contained in the lectures are fascinating. As a point of departure Bernstein determines to pursue music as an innate universal language that is ultimately genetic. He makes numerous references to the linguistic theories of Noam Chomsky. As he puts it, "With each passing year (linguistics) seems to substantiate ever more convincingly the hypothesis of innate grammatical competence, a genetically endowed language faculty which is universal. It is a human endowment; it proclaims the unique power of the human spirit."

ACCORDINGLY, Bernstein has spent three lectures on the three divisions of linguistics: phonology, syntax and semantics. He has made use of linguistics according to the view of his Harvard professor, David Prall, that "the best way to 'know' a thing is in the context of another discipline." In turn Bernstein has constructed a diagram to illuminate the comparison:

LANGUAGE	MUSIC
D. Super-Surface Structure (Poetry)	D. Surface-Structure (Music)
C. Surface Structure (Prose)	C. Deep Structure (Prose)
B. Underlying strings	B. Underlying strings
A. Chosen elements	A. Chosen elements

The element of speculation is musical semantics: The meaning of music.

Through all of it Bernstein provides numerous musical examples. He is very skillful at developing his hypotheses, and the result is never less than interesting.

All of this preliminary development is directed toward the last three and most conjectural lectures: The Delights and Dangers of Ambiguity, The Twentieth Century Crisis, and The Poetry of Earth. Delights and Dangers of Ambiguity deals with the classical development of the 18th and 19th centuries, when Western tradition music evolved into its own mature language, challenging the composer to come to its terms.

Bernstein sheds important light on the Twentieth Century Crisis, identifying in inimitable style the two principal protagonists: Schoenberg and Stravinsky. The significance of this lecture has less to do with Bernstein's acute penetration of the styles of these two giants than with the influence of their music on subsequent generations of composers. But further, this lecture leads to the last one, The Poetry of Earth.

At last Bernstein pulls together all that has gone before and constructs, in his unique fashion, a rationale for his own composing style and for his world-view of music. He deliberately asserts that tonality in the traditional diatonic sense OK in today's new music, but no less so than Schoenberg's serial technique nor Stravinsky's polytonality.

In the evolution of art music and tonality in the Western tradition there continues among the makes of such music a compulsion to originality. In our cultural heritage it is easy enough to understand. What is sometimes puzzling though is that the compulsion to originality, in our own time, often takes precedence over those traditional harmonic values that we identify with emotionally. But, after all, we are still in the throes of the decay and decline of the cultural phenomenon of Western Europe, the evolution and tradition of harmonic music.

Bernstein concludes his Unanswered Question with a personal advocacy of uninhibited eclecticism. Finally his lecture series sheds little new light on the future of music. But the traversal, like the man, is never dull. And Bernstein's linguistic analysis of music (al la Noam Chomsky) is one of the most compelling treatments of its kind.

Fall season begins at Sunset Center

By RICHARD TYLER
Director, Sunset Community and Cultural Center

THE FALL SEASON has started. Tonight, Scenes and Revelations, the winner of the Festival of Firsts playwriting competition, premieres in Carmel at the Sunset Theatre.

The play has continued to garner recognition. Shortly after the Carmel award, it received the coveted Audrey

Sunset Views

Wood Award in New York where it is being considered for a spring production. Chicago's Goodman Theater has scheduled it in this winter's season. This is your opportunity to see the play before it moves on to national productions. The play will run through this weekend and next Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Tickets are still available at the director's office. Admission is $4.50 and $3.50 for senior citizens and students. For more information, phone 624-3996.

FRIDAY IS the last day to renew subscriptions for the Festival of Dance. The series is nearly sold out. However, there is still an opportunity to reserve subscriptions or single tickets. The festival this year will present The Chinese Circus of Taiwan on Wednesday, Oct. 18; Bella Lewitzky Dance Company on Wednesday, Nov. 8; Dance Spectrum on Dec. 9; and the Massenkoff Russian Folk Festival on March 24. Phone the director's office for more information.

NEXT THURSDAY at 1 p.m. the Brown Bag Cinema will resume. The first films include Ski: The Outer Limits, brilliantly photographed and directed with an alternate pace of seriousness and levity and intertwining great Baroque music by Corelli and Bach. Its finale must be one of the most beautifully photographed, process-printed and prismatic-distorted overlapping, slow motion images ever seen.

Accompanying this will be The Symphony Sound in which Henry Lewis, guest conductor of the Royal Philharmonic of London, talks about the unique sounds of the symphony orchestra. The orchestra will play examples of many periods and composers. Bring a brown bag lunch and join us on the terrace or in room 4 if the weather is inclement. Lunch is at noon and Sunset supplies the coffee. At 1 p.m., we will move to the Leonard Carpenter Hall for about one hour of film. Here is an opportunity to revive the old-fashioned spirit of community and neighborliness. No reservations or tickets are required.

ON WEDNESDAY, the Monterey Peninsula Film Society will present the second program in its series at 7:30 p.m. in Carpenter Hall. Presentations planned include The Dove, a parody of Bergman films, and two major of Luis Bunuel, Viridiana, which includes one of Bunuel's most famous banquet scenes, and Nazarin, a picturesque pilgrim's progress in a world dominated by physical needs and limitations. Membership entitles you to reduced entrance fees. Non-members will pay an admission of $3.50. Tickets are available at the door on the night of the performance.

THE CARMEL CITIZENS' Committee invites the public to a town meeting on annexation of unincorporated Carmel. The meeting will take place at Sunset Theatre on Tuesday at 8 p.m. Panelists will include County Supervisor Sam Farr; Michael Johnson, executive director of the county Local Agency Formation Commission; Jack Collins, Carmel city administrator; Donald Freeman, non-resident in favor; and Elwood J. Wilson, non-resident opposed.

A NEW COMPREHENSIVE musicianship course for children ages 4 to 8 is being offered at Sunset Center by Roxanna Lee, a graduate of Mills College in Oakland, who has taught the Yamaha Music Course for 11 years. The Basic Musicianship Course encompasses all phases of the musical experience, including rhythm, melody, harmony, ear training and other skills through enjoyable group participation. The course consists of 40 hour-long sessions over a period of 10 months. The children are grouped in classes according to their ages. Classes begin Oct. 3. For information, phone Mrs. Lee at 625-0233 or 624-6903.

THE SECOND ANNUAL Festival of Firsts playwriting competition ended Aug. 31. We had 190 entries. Last year there were 85. The task of the preliminary reading by the three local judges is in its final stages. Dame Judith Anderson has once again accepted the difficult position of one of the final judges in the search for the prize winner.

A few interesting facts: we received entries from as far as Greece and Sweden; both were written by students studying abroad, one of them was a California resident. Every state is represented except Montana and the Dakotas. Three operas were submitted as well as 20 musicals. Many letters were received praising the city for its continued interest in the arts.

You can show your interest and support by attending the local premiere performance of last year's winner, a play written by Elan David Garonzik. His play Scenes and Revelations, is being performed at Sunset Theatre through next weekend.

'Scenes and Revelations' premieres tonight in Carmel

The world premiere of Scenes and Revelations, the play that won Carmel's first annual Festival of Firsts playwriting competition, will be presented Thursday, Sept. 14, at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel.

The play will be staged Thursday-Saturday evenings, Sept. 14-16 and 21-23. Curtain is at 8 p.m.

Scenes and Revelations is the story of four young women who live in Lancaster, Pa., in 1894. The four sisters are members of the Mennonite order, one of the Christian groups derived from the Anabaptist movement in Holland and noted for its simplicity of life and rejection of oaths and military service. Because the order was less strict than the Amish people who also inhabit the region, the girls were allowed to attend public school and developed strong convictions and liberated actions which made them outcasts from both their own people and the townspeople. The story takes place on the eve of their return to their ancestral land. In flashbacks, the story is told of their creative aspirations, their impossible love affairs and the realization of their need and responsibility for each other.

The prize-winning playwright is Elan David Garonzik, a native of Lancaster, Pa., who studied at the American College in Paris, George Washington University in Washington, D.C., and Carnegie-Mellon University.

At Carnegie-Mellon, he wrote his first full-length play and won a prize in playwriting as well as having three of his scripts produced. In 1976 he received the Shubert Fellowship Award in Playwriting, an award not made for a particular script, but extended for merit and promise in the field of playwriting.

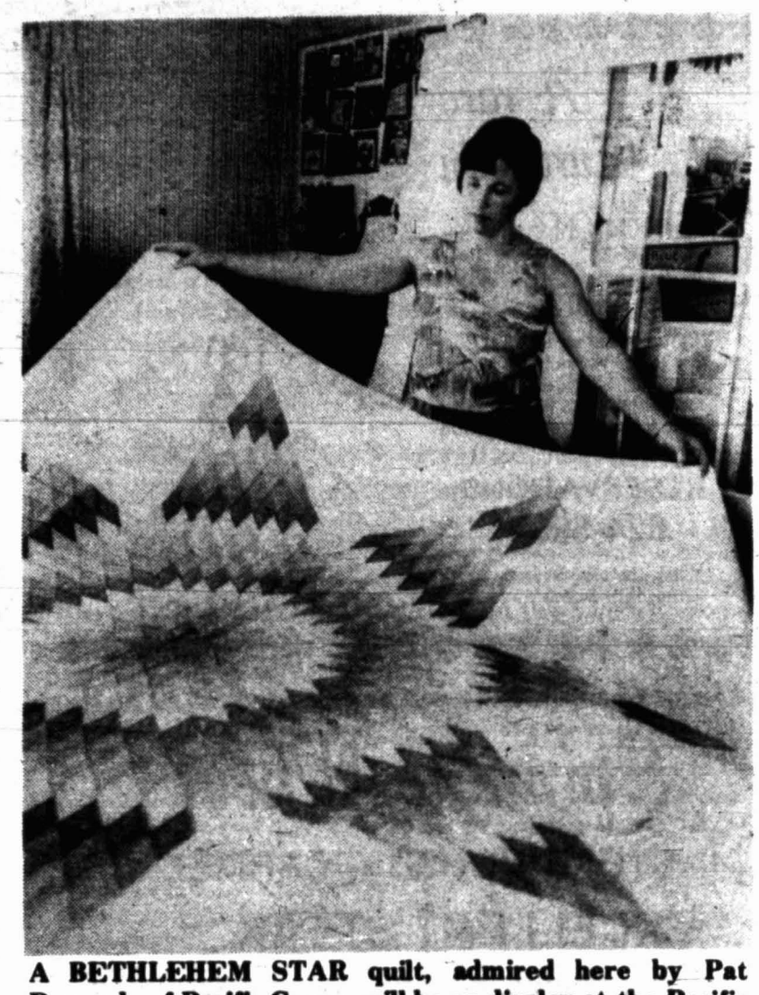
Garonzik works for the American Federation of Teachers in Washington, D.C., where he organizes, researches and writes a four-page tabloid of ancient history called the World Chronicle.

The four Longnecker sisters are played by Mercedes McCloskey, Deirdre Moore, Elaine Bush and Carol Bialek. Other members of the cast are Dhav Dillard, Dwight Marshall, Eric Renz, Vonn Hamilton and Dan Eaton.

The director, Peter De Bono, began working in theater on the Monterey Peninsula at the age of 12, when he became the stage manager at Carmel's Studio Theatre, owned at the time by his brother Jerry with co-founder Betty Hacket Martin. He attended Monterey Peninsula College and UCLA before beginning a professional acting career in Los Angeles. He is now a drama instructor at Monterey Peninsula College.

General admission is $4.50; senior citizens and students will be admitted for $3.50. Advance tickets are available at the Sunset Center director's office.

For more information, phone 624-3996.



A BETHLEHEM STAR quilt, admired here by Pat Dormedy of Pacific Grove, will be on display at the Pacific Grove Heritage Society Quilt Show Friday-Sunday, Sept. 15-17, at Chautauqua Hall, 16th and Central, Pacific Grove.

Ben Goldman began his career in Hollywood as an actor and singer and founded the American Opera Company in Los Angeles 20 years ago. He produced more than 25 operas on the West Coast, including Puccini's Tosca and Il Trittico at the Ambassador Theatre in 1977.

Brown Bag films start Sept. 21

The 1978-79 season of Sunset Center's free Brown Bag Cinema program will begin Thursday, Sept. 21, with a screening of Ski: The Outer Limits and The Symphony Sound.

The Brown Bag Cinema program traditionally begins with a gathering for lunch at noon on the terrace at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel (inside when the weather is unpleasant). The films begin at 1 p.m. in room 20.

Ski: The Outer Limits is a film about great skiers with background music by Corelli and Bach. In The Symphony Sound, Henry Lewis, director of the New Jersey Symphony, talks about the unique sound of the symphony orchestra.

Sunset Center provides the coffee for lunch. Everyone is welcome to attend.

For more information, phone 624-3996.

Park guide available

A new Guide to the California State Park System, which locates and briefly describes state parks, beaches, reserves and recreation areas and provides information on various kinds of state park activities, was recently published by the state Parks and Recreation Department.

It includes a large map showing 222 state park units, information on how to make campsite reservations, capsule descriptions of park units and lists that indicate which parks offer hiking and bicycling, group picnic facilities and campground and boating facilities.

The guide sells for 50 cents at state park units or may be obtained by mail for $1 from the Department of Parks and Recreation Distribution Center, P.O. Box 2390, Sacramento, Calif. 95811.

Wildflower slide show Friday at MPC

The wildflowers of California will be the subject of a color slide program and commentary by Eleanor Davisson Friday, Sept. 15, at Monterey Peninsula College, Engineering room 3, 980 Fremont St., Monterey. The free program begins at 1:30 p.m.

A resident of Pacific Grove since 1969, she once resided in Berkeley where she began photographing wildflowers in the early 1950s.

She is the author of a volume on wildflowers of the U.S. plains and Western states that is part of the Rockefeller Study of American Wildflowers, a series published by McGraw-Hill. Mrs. Davisson said it marked the first time that photographs, rather than paintings, were used in the series to depict wildflowers.

Library photos at Sunset

Photographs that trace the history of Harrison Memorial Library in Carmel are on display through Sept. 30 in the lobby of Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel.

In addition to the historical prints, photos are on display of the library renovation completed in 1976. Roger Fremier took the pictures.

Farrell's Touch

By the Rev. LARRY FARRELL

MANY MEN hold the police in contempt. In my many years at Soledad as chaplain, I have heard the "Man" called every name in the devil's dictionary and I have heard these same detractors cry out in fear for the help and protection of the police and say "Why did it take you so long to get here?"

It matters not what lawbreakers think or say about the police. What matters is how you look in almighty God's eyes. He created the universe and men and he set in motion all law and order.

He said, "Keep my commandments. Blessed are the peacemakers." In God's eyes, cops are tops and they are tops in the eyes of all good men who live in divinely inspired law and order. May the Good Shepherd who guards the sheepfold hold you in the hollow of his hand.

Your devotion to the protection of our lives, limbs and liberty is not in the limbo of praise, at least not in ours.

(Editor's note: Father Farrell delivered this invocation Friday to the California Crime Prevention Officers' Association).

BREWERY RAIDED BY POLICE

Beer mash, five gallons of whiskey and 43 bottles of beer were confiscated by Police Chief Gus Englund when he raided a house on San Carlos and Second on Saturday night.

Englund said he had "secured evidence that the resident had sold a flask of whiskey." Granted a search warrant, Englund and two police officers entered the house where no still was found but whiskey and beer thermometers were discovered.

Englund said that after analysis, the whiskey was found to be an inferior grade and dangerous.

CARMEL IS LOCKING UP

Three recent burglaries have shop owners and residents locking doors, barring windows and hiding their money.

One housewife, who has never locked a door in her house, says she never leaves home without turning the key now. However, she leaves the key in her door on the outside. "No gentlemanly burglar would take advantage of that," she explained.

A survey found that shopkeepers have installed double bars on their back windows, but have failed to change the locks on their front doors. Most of those are vintage 1899 and can be opened with a latchkey. One businessman, who used to hide his money under a bolt of sheeting at night, has changed the place to under a roll of toweling.

CROSSROADS FINAL COLUMN (EDITORIAL)

Crossroads, a Pine Cone column, has accomplished what it set out to do in Carmel. Its writer, Roy McCullough, is moving to the East Coast where he plans to change the nature of the people and the character of the towns.

He claims that since writing his column, people here speak to each other instead of brushing one another off.

Streets have gone unpaved in accordance with his wishes.

Trees have been spared, dogs licensed and cows that once roamed the streets have been incarcerated.

Carmel's moral fiber also has improved. Men and women arrange their traveling itinerary so they don't leave town simultaneously.

McCullough can say when he leaves people will miss him.

BOND NEEDED TO EXPAND SCHOOLS

A bond issue is needed on the city ballot according to Superintendent Stuart Mitchell after he presented the fall enrollment increases to the school board at Wednesday night's meeting.

A 4 per cent increase over last year's figures indicates a need for school room expansion because of already overcrowded conditions in the elementary school levels, he said.

Sunset Library is being used as a classroom as is Wood's multi-use room, said Mitchell.

He told the school board that up to five rooms are needed for the 1954 school year to free Sunset Library for its proper use.

COUNCIL BLASTS BUSINESS ASSOCIATION

The Carmel City Council blasted the Carmel Business Association for not appearing at Thursday night's meeting to submit a report on its plan for relieving parking congestion in Carmel.

The following Monday, the business association met to draw up a report that indicated the council was at fault. It said that a plan to acquire a parking lot was submitted to the council but was rejected because of its illegal petition form.

It discounted Councilman Donald Craig's statement that fringe area shopping districts would eventually develop and automatically solve Carmel parking problems, as "silly."

VALLEY POST OFFICE SITE CHOSEN

The grounds of the White Oak Inn in Los Laureles Village will be the site of a new Carmel Valley post office.

Philip Wilson submitted the low bid on his site, which is located across the road from the existing post office.

Wilson said he plans the new unit as the first stage in a master plan for a shopping center on the 12-acre site.

Construction will begin next month. The post office will have 1,400 square feet of floor space and room for expansion when necessary.

OLOF DAHLSTRAND ON COMMISSION

The seating of Olof Dahlstrand on the Carmel Planning Commission brought it to full strength at Wednesday's meeting. He is replacing the late George Willox.

Born in Wisconsin, Dahlstrand received his architectural degree from Cornell University. In 1948, he moved to San Francisco where he joined a professional group. Then in 1959 he and his family moved to Carmel where he opened his own office.

DUMP AND CORPORATION YARD APPROVED

The City Council approved last night a recommendation that a combination dump site-corporation yard be acquired by the city.

The idea by the council's ad hoc committee named 11 possible sites under consideration. All locations are outside the Carmel city limits.

Councilman Herbert Blanks said the existing corporation yard at the new police-public works building at Junipero and Fifth was "OK for now. Annexations could increase the size of the city," he said, "which would make the corporation yard inadequate."

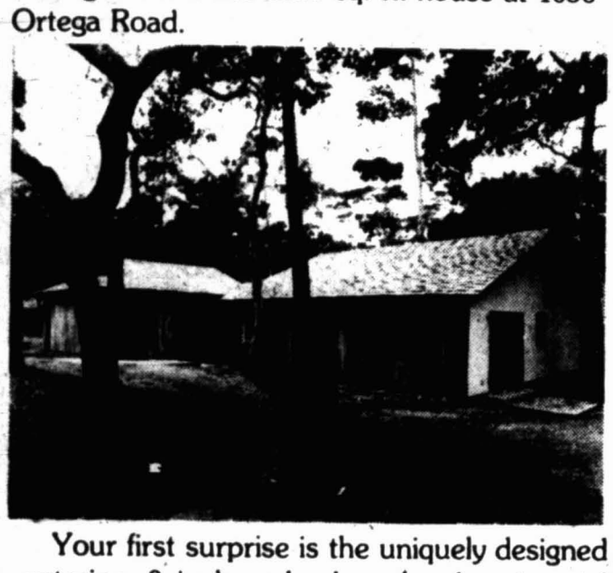
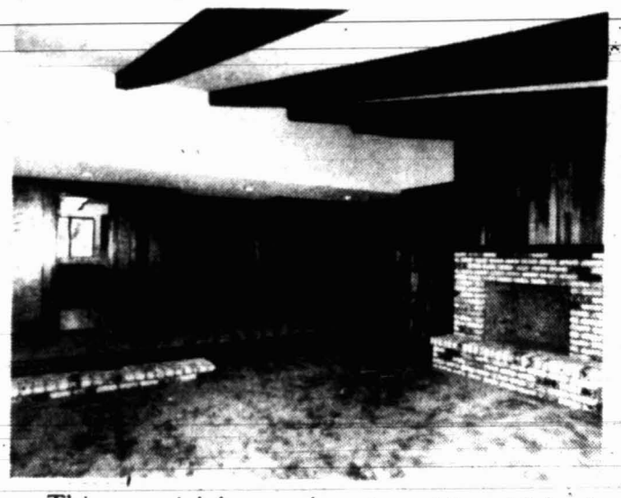
Custom House on Ortega Road

Just one-half mile in from the Country Club Gate, you come to a neighborhood of wide, generous lots; tall pines and leafy oaks; and beautifully designed, spacious houses. Newest among them is the 1880 sq. ft. house at 1056 Ortega Road.



Your first surprise is the uniquely designed exterior: 3 inch cedar boards of variegated color, laid vertically to create an arresting pattern. A breezeway separates house and garage and leads to carved double redwood doors. Going in, you arrive at a broad entrance hall, set a couple of steps above the sunken 20 x 20 living room.

Its walls are panelled in various woods, an elevated brick fireplace stands at one end, flanked by copious bookshelves, and roof beams lead down to picture windows opening to the back garden.



This special house has two 18 x 14 bedrooms, one at either end of the central hall, both facing the rear, each with its own well-appointed bath. The north bedroom features a giant walk-in closet, faced with 4 sliding, full-length mirror doors. Its bath has glassed-in tub and shower, double sinks, and ample storage. The south bedroom has 2 large closets with louvred doors, separated by a recessed wall of bookshelves. Its bath also serves as guest powder room: double sinks, a private lavatory and glassed-in stall shower.

Across the front is the sizeable kitchen and spacious combination dining and family room. Cabinets of flash-grain ash line the kitchen, and still more are located over the wet bar in the family room. A small laundry and pantry area separates the two rooms.

All floors (except the vinyl-tiled kitchen) are covered in deep, soft doeskin carpeting. Every room has beamed ceilings. Four thermostats provide selective heating. Space is the key-word here, from the generous rooms to the 123 foot wide lot. When you see it, you'll agree it is properly priced at $169,500.

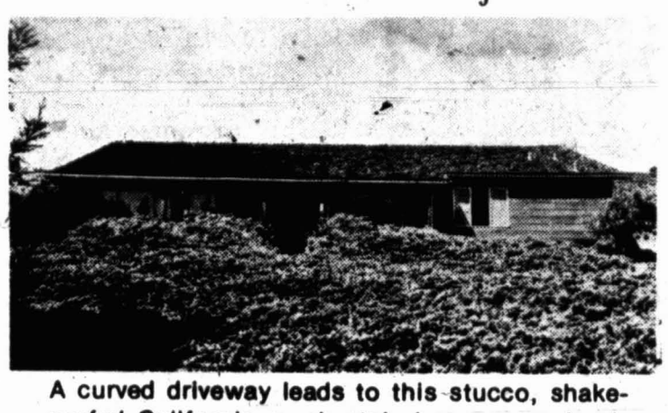
Rancho Rio Vista Hilltop Home



A curved driveway leads to this stucco, shake-roofed California ranch style home on a level, sunny, street-to-street site enhanced with handsome oaks and fragrant pines, also with view of the Valley hills and a glimpse of the ocean. There's ample space, too, for swimming pool, tennis court or, maybe, a guest house.

Beamed ceiling of satiny redwood, brick fireplace, custom crafted shutters, bookcase and cabinets, also glass doors to a sheltered brick courtyard with a barbecue, are found in the living room open at one end to the dining room.

The tile-countered kitchen, with windowed breakfast area and door to the barbecue courtyard, is so large it could be a kitchen/family room. Three bedrooms, each with outside entrance, and two baths complete the 1,800-square-foot interior. In addition is a double garage.

Running the full length of the house in back, this paved patio is enclosed by a redwood picket fence. Deferred maintenance on this property, situated in a neighborhood of high-priced homes on large sites at the entrance to Carmel Valley, accounts for its price, $159,000, and, with 26 percent down, the owner will consider carrying a loan for a qualified buyer.

Wormer pleased by law

By government order, commercial earthworm production officially became part of California's agriculture industry last week and Jim Guillet of Carmel Valley is pleased it happened.

Guillet, who owns Worm-Gro Farms in Salinas, says the increased recognition for the $10 million a year industry should eliminate some past problems and stabilize it for growers and dealers.

Already, Guillet said, worm dealers have established a price clearinghouse with a hotline, updated twice a day, that lists current worm prices.

The dealers also may try some industry-wide marketing campaigns, Guillet said, although this is still in the discussion stage. Guillet himself promotes and sells both earthworms and nutrient-rich worm casting fertilizer.

The new law, signed by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. on Wednesday of last week, creates the vermiculture division of the State Department of Agriculture. It allows growers to set standards for worm size and packaging and do research and promotion under a state-operated, grower-financed marketing order.

The industry also becomes eligible for disaster relief.

Growers hope to get the University of California interested in worm research and to encourage state and federal agencies to extend farm credit to worm growers.

Panhellenic society to host member tea on Saturday

Monterey Bay Panhellenic will open its 1978-79 social calendar with a membership tea at the Carmel Valley home of Mrs. George Toole on Saturday, Sept. 23, from 2 to 4 p.m.

The organization was chartered in 1954 and is made up of alumnae of National Panhellenic Conference college sororities living in Monterey County.

Seventeen of 25 sororities are represented in the membership and members attended more than 30 different colleges and universities.
